Republican State Ticket.

FOR STATE TREASURER,
MATTHEW S. QUAY, OF BEAVER COUNTY.

Republican County Ticket.

JURY COMMISSIONER,
DANIEL HESS, OF LINDEN HALL.
CORONER,
DR. S. F. LYTLE, OF PHILIPSBURG.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

It rained Republican votes in Ohio.

Vote for Dr. S. F. Lytle for coroner.

The Republicans are gaining—even in France.

Vote for Daniel Hess for jury commissioner.

Democracy has been tried again and found wanting. Kill it the next time.

Every Republican voter must go to the polls on Tuesday next and take his neighbor along.

The final advice which we give on the subject is—vote for Quay, and Hess and Lytle.

This is the year to elect honest men for office—therefore vote for Quay, Hess and Lytle.

Sen. Wm. M. Evarts is pulverizing the New York Democracy with seven-storied sentences.

Carl Schurz is for Davenport and Cleveland. This is not a high compliment for Davenport.

The Conrad B. Daisy boom has undergone a serious contraction. The cold weather in Ohio did it.

John Sherman has won a victory in Ohio, and Matthew S. Quay is going to win a victory in Pennsylvania.

Republicans, go to the polls and vote for every man on your State and county ticket. All are good men.

The E-Quay-tor is entirely too hot for Conrad B. Day. He may find a trip up Salt river exceedingly seasonable.

Great Britain threatens to smash the King of Burmah, but the latter is not frightened by that sort of talk. He has read the returns from the Soudan.

Postmasters all over the country still complain of the short supply of postal cards. Postmaster-general Vilas should deal the cards with a little more celerity.

The Ohio idea—as exemplified at the recent elections—is about to be grafted upon New York, Pennsylvania, Iowa and Virginia. It is the best thing Ohio has produced in a long while.

Since prohibition has shown that it sometimes invades the Democratic party, Democratic politicians will begin to be cautious about trifling so much with that particular buzz saw. It is not so funny when it cuts both ways.

Hand bouquets costing $50 to $100 are a feature of bridal toilets in New York. Still, if a girl makes up her mind to elope with the coachman, the bouquet may be dispensed with and a rope-ladder substituted.

The New York Sun is trying to run Mr. Davenport down by calling him an "iceberg." The general experience in running down icebergs is unfavorable to such undertakings. The iceberg invariably gets the better of it.

Right on the heels of the Democratic smash-up in Ohio comes the announcement that the grand old Roman Thurman has been entertaining that bad, b-a-d Republican, Stephen B. Elkins, at his home in Columbus. No well regulated Democratic organ will fail to observe that Thurman should be fined 20 for this piece of disorderly conduct.

Remember that Day, at the representative of Pennsylvania Democracy, is the incarnation of all that is corrupt and bad in that party. He represents the extra session of Pattison's legislature and hails from the Governor's own city. Remember that Quay is the representative of all that is noble and good in Republicanism and that a vote to elect him will be a vote against Democratic Free Trade fanatics.

The Present Situation.

The Watchman of last week virtually gives up the contest for the election of its candidate for State Treasurer, but, nevertheless, it repeats some of the misstatements of former issues.

The statements are such obvious falsehoods, however, that cannot but react against Mr. Day, whom they are designed to aid.

In the first place, the Watchman has never been able to prove any corruption against Mr. Quay. It has made charges which are denied by Ex-Gov. Curtin, the idol of Centre county Democrats, and by the late Judge Black, the greatest of Pennsylvania Democrats. It is easy to make charges, but another thing to prove them.

We are pleased to know that Republicans have gone through the entire campaign without attempting to say a word against the character of Mr. Day. We have, indeed, freely acknowledged that he is a respectable and successful merchant, and he should remain so. He is not fitted for State Treasurer and it would be an injury to him to elect him to that office. Cleveland was a good enough Sheriff, but as a President he is a conspicuous failure. Quay has had public experience, and has never been found wanting.

There is this difference between the men, but the principles which they represent are what should elicit our attention. Look at our fair State, the richest and most prosperous in the Union, with her workshops closed, her energies palsied, her business men hesitating to take a step forward. They know the menace which Democrats have held out in the reduction of the tariff and they spoke against it in unmistakable tones last year. Let their protest be equally emphatic on the 3d of November.

We repeat that the great and original policy of the Democratic party (the only one by which they have, for many years succeeded,) is that of taking men for office whose only merit is that people know nothing about them. It cannot be said that they have been found wanting for the reason that they have never been tried. But in Cleveland and Pattison the people certainly have enough of a bad experiment, and are not willing to try Day, who is much more likely to be a bad, disagreeable, stormy Day, than a pleasant one.

Remember this, voter, when you come to the polls on the 3d of next month. See that your ticket has—not Day, but Quay on it. Examine the name closely as the two are much alike. Day is spurious, Quay is genuine.

The election of Quay will be one step to restore confidence and good times.

Quay as a Soldier.

* * And Quay resigned precisely six days before the battle of Fredericksburg which was fought the 13th.

The above with much more of the same kind is floating in Democratic circles. It's not a lie, but it does not tell the truth. Col. Quay did resign before the battle of Fredericksburg, and the acceptance of that resignation by his superior officers was in his pocket on the morning of the battle. Now we have the word of Capt. D. F. McCready and a score or more of company H, 134th Regt., that Col. Quay attached himself to the staff of Gen. Humphries as a volunteer aid, and crossed the river with the command, and that, too, against the wish of the general, and the entire command. The part taken by General Humphries' command in that memorable battle is history, written there by the blood of some of the bravest of the Federal soldiers. Those who know anything of war, and more particularly the duties, hardships and perils of an aid to a general of a division on the field of battle are competent to judge Quay as a soldier. His soldier's record, in "Burnside's slaughter" is as bright and glorious as any of those who faced death on that gory field.

Hon. John I. Mitchell, U. S. Senator, is speaking for Col. Quay.

Gen. Beaver, who did good service on the stump in Ohio, has returned to resume his labors in his own State. There are few more effective speakers than the General. He always draws great crowds. A gallant soldier, an able lawyer, an honest man and a true patriot he has a warm place in the hearts of the Republicans of Pennsyvania.

There is no truth in the report that Senator Cameron is about to resign his seat in the United States Senate.

Business and Laboring Men, Look Here!

The following appeal has been signed by eighteen hundred of the business men of the State. We print it for the consideration of every business and laboring man, who intends to vote on the 3d of November:

The Democratic party, through its Convention which nominated Mr. Cleveland for President, declared in favor of the restricted importation of goods of foreign manufacture in terms as follows:

"Instead of the Republican party's discredited scheme and false pretense of friendship for American labor, expressed BY IMPOSING TAXES, we demand, in behalf of the Democracy, freedom for American labor, BY REDUCING TAXES."

It has been represented that, in view of the success of the Democratic party, at the last Presidential election, and in accordancce with the above declaration—so unmistakably in the direction of Free Trade—a most determined effort will be made by the House of Representatives to greatly reduce the duties on all imported goods.

Against a policy so detrimental to the welfare of the people of this Nation, the Republicans of Pennsylvania ought to record their protese in the most emphatic manner in which it can be done, namely: by the maintenance of Republican principles, evidenced by the success at the November election of the candidates of the party solemnly pledged to the protection of American labor and business.

Republicans are opposed to any such sweeping reduction of duties on goods manufactured abroad for the reason so ably stated in the minority report of Ways and Means Committee prepared by Hon. Wm. McKinley of Ohio, to-wit:

First.—It will disturb business (the discussion of it has already done this), it will unsettle values, retard incipient enterprises, cripple those now established, impair confidence among business men, so essential to our development and prosperity, and will bring no countervailing benefits.

Second—It will of necessity force down the price of labor in the United States, it will stimulate imports, increase competition from abroad, which can only be successfully met by reducing the cost of home manufacture.

ITS EFFECT ON LABOR.

The testimony is uniform, and not contradicted, that labor will be compelled to bear a large share of the reduction. Mr. William Weihe, the president of the largest labor organization in the country, said in his speech before the Committee of Ways and Means: "That any reduction of the duties would reduce the price of labor generally." We cannot, therefore, too strongly emphasize our opposition to this Democratic policy which tends to reduce American labor to the foreign standard, either in price or condition. The maintenance of a fair and adequate scale of wages for American workmen is indispensable to their comfort, their well-being and the education of their families; is essential to the good order of society, the stability of our institutions and the welfare and progress of our country.

If Pennsylvania were to falter in her devotion to the principles of Protection to American labor by permitting the success of the Democratic party in the great manufacturing city of Philadelphia, or in the State, on the third day of November, it would be maintained on the floor of Congress, with vigor and damaging effect that the Keystone State—the manufacturing centre of the country—was wholly indifferent to this matter of a reduction of duties on imported goods, and it is because of this that we particularly urge all those who have the best interest of the whole people at heart to unite in maintaining Republican principles by an emphatic Republican majority, both in the city and in the State.

The Facts of the Case.

A review of the political field at this juncture is full of encouragement for the Republicans. In Ohio the Germans, disgusted with the double dealing of the Democracy on the liquor question, are back in the Republican party, whose principles they have always admired. In New York the Mugwumps, after a few months of wandering in the Democratic wilderness, have also returned to their first love, and are among the most enthusiastic supporters of the Republican ticket. The Irish protectionists, who refused to support Cleveland last fall, have apparently come to stay.

In Pennsylvania, says the Meyersdale Commercial, there never was any doubt of the triumphant election of Colonel Quay; but with all these signs of encouragement, Mr. Day ought to be buried under a majority of forty thousand, and we believe he will. Republicans who admire talent and grit cannot hope to find a better example of these qualities than in Colonel Quay. He has given the best years of his life to the service of his country and his party, and he has served both loyally and unselfishly. Though in a position to profit financially, no man has dared to charge that he has taken advantage of his position, and he is almost as poor to-day as when he first entered politics. Other men have trafficed in public office, but Colonel Quay can show as clean a pair of hands as any man who is prominent in the councils of either party. Under these circumstances it would be an act of supreme ingratitude for any Republican to remain away from the polls or cast a ballot for Conrad B. Day.

Tuesday, November 3, will be a very gloomy Day for Conrad B.

If demanding a fair vote and an honest count in the South is waving the bloody shirt, what would these loyal Democratic croakers call Fitzhugh Lee's parading through Virginia in a rebel uniform, accompanied by a company of cavalry and the "stars and bars?" In their speeches they appeal to the voter to "follow the flag that was carried by Pickett's brigade at Gettysburg." Why is this not denounced by Northern dough-faces as "waving the bloody shirt!" Why?

Remember that the election of Day would mean the approval of the extravagant and foolish Democratic administration of this State. However, there is no danger of that.

Wiping Out the Blaine Vote.

Mr. Megargee, the Democratic candidate for Register of Wills, says the Philadelphia Press, made a campaign speech on Friday evening in which he is reported as saying: "We must stand together and wipe out the stain on the history of our State made by giving such a man as Blaine 81,000 majority."

If Mr. Megargee had desired to bring out all Republicans and make them "stand together" for the Republican ticket he could not have spoken any words better calculated to promote that result. The Republicans of Pennsylvania are proud of the 81,000 majority they cast for Mr. Blaine. Instead of regarding it as a "stain on the history of our State," they point to it as a splendid monument of the spirit and zeal of the Republican masses. There is no trophy in the long array of their achievements which they cherish with more satisfaction. If the issue is presented of "wiping it out" they will take good care that the result shall not be doubtful.

It has been thought that Republican votes were sought for a part or the whole of the Democratic ticket. But it is clear from Mr. Megargee's utterance that this an error and that Republican votes are not wanted. We take it that Republicans will know how to gratify Mr. Megargee in this matter.

The Democracy are going through the old grave yard again, and are whistling to keep up their courage.

How sad it is to read of poor John McCullough. He is demented and speechless. On Saturday he was removed from the Bloomingdale Asylum for the Insane in New York, to his home in Philadelphia. Nothing could be done for him at the Asylum and he has gone home to die.

Vote for Matthew S. Quay for State Treasurer.

Uncle Dana persists in calling Davenport, the Republican candidate for governor of New York, "an iceberg." This would seem to indicate that Uncle Dana has discovered a fiendish purpose on the part of Davenport to treat Hill to an old fashioned freeze-out.

The Republicans can afford to give Quay at least 85,000 majority.

Their Soldier Records.

The reports circulated in Democratic journals reflecting on Quay's military record have reacted with great effect against the authors. The first to take the charge up and repel it was Colonel McClure in the Times and denounce the authors of it. The soldiers of Quay's old regiment first and then the old veterans generally throughout the State took it up and showed its utter falsity. Colonel Quay has numerous letters from soldier-Democrats who deprecated the political slander. The ridiculousness, as well as the want of tact displayed in this mode of advancing Day's candidacy is apparent to all persons familiar with war times, as Saddler Day was one of the most virulent of that class of citizens who could never see any good in the war or in "coercing States," freeing "niggers," the draft, the constitutional amendments or any of the war measures, constitutional or otherwise. Quite content to amass wealth by making harness for Government mules and Federal cavalry, he saw little virtue in the raids on the South or their interference with the peculiar institutions of that section, which his early Democratic inspirations had taught him was the subject of precious regard by his party. In all truth and fact, candidate Day, while a decent enough man both now and during the war, never enlisted himself nor served in any capacity for a day—no pun meant—or an hour; and, if not a Copperhead during that critical period, subscribed to nearly all odious doctrines of opposition which gave rise to this distinctive appellation.

Quay was a soldier; Day was one of the stay-at-homes.

A monthly publication named The Socialist comes to us from Philadelphia. The copy before us is No. 1 of Vol. 1. It purports to be in the interest of workingmen. We belong to that large class and therefore glanced at its contents with some interest. The first article in the publication is entitled "Our Sunday Laws." That is a suitable subject for an editorial, but the article in question, in its teachings, is destructive of the laboring man's best interests. Instead of disseminating an instruction which would lead laboring men to more thoroughly respect and observe the Sabbath, the teachings of this article are quite the reverse. We hold that the greatest blow that can be struck at the interest of the laboring man is to destroy the sanctity of the American Sabbath. If the laboring man will not respect it, the capitalist will not, and the result will be that all workshops will be kept in operation that day and the laborer at work seven days, receiving no more pay than he previously received for the six days. Thus his entire life will be without a holiday. There are a thousand and one arguments that might be urged against the teachings of the article, but having given one, we shall reserve the thousand for future use. The other means taken by this outrageous pamphlet to serve the interests of the laboring man may be all right, but our disgust on reading this article was too intense to permit us to read further. We advise laboring men as well as all other classes not to touch it.

The Ohio election will have a good effect upon business, which has been shockingly depressed ever since the advent of the Democrats in power. Its result indicates that the accidental and fraudulent accession of that party to power is by no means to be made a permanent thing. Now let New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia give Republican majorities, as is more than probable, and we may look for a real boom in business.

The State of Iowa, by a recent census, has a population of 1,733,980, of which 1,443,576 are of American birth. It has 420,794 legal voters and only 13,225 persons aged ten years and over who cannot read and write. No other State in the Union can show corresponding figures. It is one of the strongest Republican States in the Union.

The moral of the Ohio victory is—don't trifle with Republicans when they are out of power. Then they unite, and instead of fighting each other, fight the enemy. This they will do November 3d in Pennsylvania, New York and Virginia.

Republicans soliloquy on the change from the defeats of last year to the victories of this year:

"Sweet are the uses of adversity,
Which like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in its head."

An enormous serpent was recently found in Santa Barbara county, Cal. Its head was from 2½ to 3 feet wide, and about 4 feet in length. The body was 30 feet long, having flukes at the end of the tail like a shark. The creature had 13 teeth on each side in the upper jaw, each tooth being about the size of a man's thumb.

Poetry.

THE COWBOY IN SAN ANTONIO.

Gaily the cowboy
Smoked his cigar
As he was hastening
To the Green Bar,
Shouting: "From Shootersville
Hither I come;
Barkeep, O barkeep,
Where is your rum!"

He for the Green Bar
Long time had wept,
Eagerly searching for it
While others slept,
Shouting: "From Shootersville
Hither I come,
Here, you old scoundrel,
Set up your rum!"

Firing his pistol off,
Scaring the town;
Yelling like one possessed,
"I'll burn you brown!"
Shouting: "From Shootersville
Hither I come;
D—n it all! d—n it all!
Gimme more rum!"

Him two policemen
Hold in their grip,
While this wild cowboy
Feels pretty cheap,
Whining: "From Shootersville,
A stranger I come,
Policeman, policeman!
Oh, let me go home."

OFF THE FIELD.

Lay down your little ball and bat,
The season dies to-day;
Take off your suit and dainty hat,
And lay your scores away.

The umpire's occupation's gone;
No more he'll strut about
As if he owned the place alone,
And yelled his little "Out!"

The pitcher can retire a space
And give his arm a rest;
The catcher get his hands in place,
And—ditto all the rest.

IN AFTER YEARS.

In after years if you and I should meet
Upon Life's wars, with worn and weary feet,
Should chance to come together for a day,
Would we find traces of a love grown gray
And cold with change and time so sure and fleet,
Or would our pulses quicken and warmer beat,
And the old love come back to us replete
With memories of joys that could not stay,
In after years?

I question and I wonder, love, my sweet,
If thou would say I love thee, and complete
My aimless life and all its cares allay!
But patiently I must await and pray,
Trusting those words to me thou wilt repeat
In after years.

STILL CAUSE FOR THANKFULNESS.

The leaves are falling, falling fast,
And chilly blows the northern blast,
The fields have lost their bloom,
But while we grieve that beauty fades,
That dreary are the groves and glades,
One ray still lights the gloom:
The teasing fly has run his race,
No more with towel or pillow case
We need to rise at night to chase
Mosquitoes round the room.

THE UNSUCCESSFUL MERCHANT.

He failed and no one was surprised,
Because he never advertised.

Our Story Teller.

HER REVENCE.

Clara's blue eyes opened in amazement.

"I thought you got on so well together," she said. "He asked for you in the drawing-room, and seemed quite sorry to hear you were ill. We all liked him immensely."

He asked after me! A piece of impertinence—a gratuitous insult—a piece of superfluous hypocrisy, which, were it possible, made my wish for revenge stronger.

"Well, I loathe him," I said, "and there's an end of it. I won't even talk about him."

I was as good as my word, and Clara, for the want of a listener, was obliged to desist from ringing the changes in praise of Mr. Hope.

I left Twickenham two or three days after this. As I drove to the station, Mr. Hope—most likely on his way to the Ramsays' house—passed the carriage. Clara was with me, so the young man bowed to us collectively. I made no sign of recognition.

"Heritage," said Clara, "that was Mr. Hope. Didn't you see him?"

"Was it?" I replied. "I had quite forgotten what he was like."

For a beginner, this was a pretty good fib. After telling it so calmly, I felt I was getting on. "Raw and awkward!" Oh, no! I did not forget either the words or the speaker. When I declare vendetta, I mean it.

Five years passed by. I was twenty-two. I had seen many people and many things. Either for better or worse, I had changed in much, but still retained my knack of never forgetting a foe or friend. Incredible as it seems, my anger against Mr. Hope was keen as ever—my wish for revenge as strong. The injury he had unwittingly done me had been greater than, even in my first burst of rage, I had imagined. During the interval his words kept recurring to my mind, and hindered the growth of proper confidence and self-esteem. A long series of pleasant little social triumphs alone permitted me to say at last that his prophecy had not been fulfilled. But now, after five years, the more I thought of the annoyance, even anguish, his words had caused me, the more vicious I felt toward him: the more resolved to compass revenge when the opportunity occurred. Oh yes; I was a good hater—not a doubt of it. I could carry my stone seven years in my pocket, then turn it and carry it seven years more, or twice seven years, never for a moment forgetting its ultimate destination.

But when should I have the chance of hurling it, and how should I act when the chance came? Except in the street, casually, I had never since met the man. Vincent Hope visited no friends of mine save the Ramsays. They left Twickenham shortly after my visit, and now lived a hundred miles from town. I had stayed with them several times, but my foe had never appeared. Of course, I had heard a great deal about him. He was now quite a famous man. To keep myself posted up in the light literature of the day, I was compelled to read his books, and in honesty I am bound to say I admired them, although I detested the author of them. Surely we must meet some day. I went out a great deal, and I heard he was much sought after. But our paths as yet had not crossed.

It was winter. I was spending some weeks with new friends, who had taken a great fancy to me—kind hospitable people, who liked to have a constant stream of visitors passing, but very slowly, through their house. The Lightons were a wealthy country family, noted for their open-handed hospitality. I never stayed at a gayer or pleasanter place than Blaize House. It was not very large; but from the way in which it seemed to extend itself to accommodate guests, my belief is it must have been built on the plan of an accordeon. I can only account for its capabilities by this theory.

Except from the tiny village which gave or took its name, Blaize House was miles away from everywhere; but its resources, so far as amusement went, made it immaterial in what part of the world it stood. The family consisted of Mr. Lighton—called by every one, even his guests, the squire; his wife, a fitting companion to him, who shared his pursuits and heartily seconded the welcome he gave to every one; and two daughters, about my own age. These may be termed the nucleus, the standing congregation of the establishment. In addition, there were sons who turned up unexpectedly and at intervals; and two or three cousins were invariably sojourning there. Add to these, again, the floating population in the shape of visitors who came and went, and you will realize that it was a merry house.

Breakfast was just over; we had been longer about it than usual, the weather being too damp and drizzly to tempt us out-of-doors. Letters were being read with the last cup of tea. The squire selected one from his pile and tossed it over to his wife, remarking that she would be glad to hear the good news it contained. Then it went from hand to hand until I had the pleasure of reading:

"MY DEAR SQUIRE,—I have just written the delightful word Finis at the bottom of a page, which is the last of my immortal(!) production. I will do no more work for weeks, but will take the train to-morrow and come to Blaize House, in time, I hope, for dinner. I do not apologize for this short notice, knowing there is even more joy within your gates over the uninvited than the invited guest.

"Yours always,
"VINCENT HOPE."

Vincent Hope! It must be my enemy. The allusion to his literary pursuits put that beyond a doubt. My time had come! I could not have selected a fairer field on which to mete out the vengeance I had stored up. As I read that letter, I positively blushed with pleasure, so vividly that I feared people might jump at entirely wrong conclusions. I thought of nothing all day but the way in which my enemy was delivered into my hands. The delight of having at last the chance of paying out the critic for the criticism produced a frame of mind which seemed to urge me to go into quiet corners and laugh at my own thoughts. I had plenty of time to mature my plans and drawsoothing pictures of the effects of my revenge. I resolved to risk no chance meeting with the foe; and feeling that a good beginning would be half the battle, before six o'clock I went to my room to arm for the fray.

Remember, I am confessing, not jesting. I sent for my maid, and bade her take down my hair and brush it. If, as her deft fingers braided my locks to my satisfaction, I had thought the girl would have comprehended me, I might have quoted certain lines of Mrs. Browning's which kept singing through my head:

"Comb it smooth, and crown it fair;
I would look in purple pall, from the lattice down the wall,
And throw scorn on one that's there."

Any way, she crowned it fair enough, and by my express desire, clad me in my most becoming gear. Then a few minutes before the bell rang, I sent her away, and stood alone before the cheval glass surveying myself with a contented smile. For my plan of revenge had at least the merit of simplicity; it was to win that man's admiration—if possible his love. Upon the day when he offered me the latter, and I coldly and scornfully rejected it, I should feel that I had squared all accounts between us in a manner highly satisfactory to myself.

How do women win men's love? I did not quite know, but I fancied, if conducted properly, the operation was not of a difficult nature. I hoped and believed I should succeed. Although my resolution reads badly, and sounds even worse, I comforted myself by thinking that as I meant to refuse what I laid myself out to win, no one would dare to censure me or to accuse me of very unbecoming conduct. And now what are my weapons with which to conquer?

I looked at myself in the glass. It may read like vanity, but I feel that old Mr. Ramsay's prediction is fairly verified. Although I blush as I appraise myself, I know I am no longer the slim school-girl—but that I am something not, perhaps, far off a beautiful woman. I am tall. My figure is certainly good. My complexion will bear any test; and something tells me I could, if I wished, make my eyes dangerous. So much for nature. As for art, I have chosen the prettiest of many pretty gowns, and my gowns now have a knack of sitting well upon me; so I am not ashamed to walk gracefully across the room, and courtesying to myself in the glass, say approvingly to my double: "Yes, Heritage Rivers, you have grown into a very decent sort of a woman—a very decent sort!" Having refreshed my memory by the repetition of that peculiarly galling phrase, I gather up my skirts and sally forth to victory.

Fortune favored me. As the greatest stranger and last arrival, it would have been in Vincent Hope's province to take our hostess into the dining-room, had we not been favored that day by the presence of a county magnate, whose claim to precedence could not be lightly overlooked. It seemed but natural and part of the plot that the squire should present Mr. Vincent Hope to Miss Rivers, and for the second time in their lives these two should be seated side by side sipping their soup in unison—but this time, if wounded vanity was to be the result of the contiguity, Miss Rivers would not be the victim.

So I began:

"You have come straight from town, Mr.—Vincent—I fancied the squire said." We all call him squire, you know."

"Oh, yes. He is an old friend of mine. But he called me Vincent Hope, I suspect."

This gave me what I wanted, an excuse for looking him full in the face—an act which, besides being a fitting tribute to his fame, enabled me to observe how time had treated him. So I lifted my lashes and looked straight at him. If time had not been quite idle with him, it had treated him kindly. He was handsome as ever. The hair near his temples being just flecked with gray did not detract from his good looks. I thought his features looked more marked, and the whole expression of his face more confident and powerful even than of old. He had won success, and, no doubt, fully realized and enjoyed the fact.

"Vincent Hope!" I echoed. "Not the Vincent Hope?"

I guessed instinctively that flattery was not a bad gun with which to open fire. By this time his name was so well known that it would have been affectation to appear to misunderstand me. He bowed and smiled.

"How delightful!" I exclaimed, my look, I am ashamed to say, confirming my words. "Now, tell me how I should talk to you. Ought I to give you my opinion about all the characters in your books; or ought I to sit silent and awed, treasuring up every word of wit and wisdom you may let fall?"

"Neither, I must beg. I have just thrown off the harness, and come down to enjoy the squire's clover. I am trying to forget there is such a thing as work in the world."

"Very well. I shall take you at your word, after, as in duty bound, saying I have read all you have written, so far as I know."

His wish to avoid the topics of his own achievements may have been a genuine one, nevertheless he seemed pleased with my remark, and looking at me with a smile, said:

"Exchange is but fair. I scarcely heard what the squire called you."

"Rivers—Heritage Rivers."

"Heritage Rivers," he echoed musingly. "It is an uncommon name; but I fancy I have heard it before."

"Oh, please don't say so, Mr. Hope. I did think I had one original thing to boast of—my name. How would you like, after looking upon all your plots as original, to find them but plagiarisms?"

He laughed.

"Many are, I fear. But you are trespassing on forbidden ground. Let us seek fresh pastures."

We did so. We talked all dinner time. I think we talked about everything under the sun—talked, moreover, almost like old friends. When he differed from my opinions, he told me in well chosen words why he differed. And as he spoke, I whispered ever and anon to myself: "Raw and awkward—a decent sort of a woman." Yet, now, Mr. Hope was condescending enough not only to listen attentively to my words, but to reply to them as if they had weight with him. All this was very delightful. The first steps to revenge were smooth and pleasant ones; for there is no need to say that I hated him as much, and felt as vindictive, as ever.

He was walking straight to his fate. I felt it when, just before Mrs. Lighton gave the signal for departure, he dropped his voice almost to a whisper, and was good enough to say that, to him, the peculiar charm of this particular dinner was that such an agreeable interchange of ideas would not be ended with the night, but might be resumed to-morrow. Coming as it did from such a famous person, I could only glance my thanks, blush, and look pleased at the compliment.

When, with the rest of my sex, I rose and walked to the door, I knew that his eyes were following me; and I knew also that, although clever, captious, critical those eyes might be, they could find little fault with my bearing or general demeanor.

At Blaize House it was understood that the gentlemen, especially the younger ones, were not allowed to linger long over the wine. When they entered the drawing-room, I was sitting, almost hidden from sight, in a recess near the window. I noticed that Mr. Hope, as he came through the door, looked round, as if in search of some one; and as, when at last he discovered my retreat, his search seemed at end, I could only think the some one was myself. However, we had little more to say to each other this evening. All the children of the house were his friends, and had many questions to ask him. We had music and singing as usual; but I made some conventional excuse, and did not take my share in them. Before we parted for the night Vincent Hope came to my side.

"Surely you sing, Miss Rivers?" he said.

"A little. But I'm not in the mood to sing to-night."

He pressed me to make the attempt, but I refused. Thinking I had done quite enough for the first evening, I kept my voice in reserve. But I talked to him for a short time about music, and found him well-versed in the art, and, of course, an unsparing critic. He was very hard on the ordinary drawing-room playing and singing, and by no means complimentary to the performers of the evening. I laughed, and told him how thankful I felt that something had warned me not to show my poor skill to such an able but severe judge. My words led him to believe that my talent for music was a very third-rate one. This was exactly what I wished him to think.

He was soon drawn away from my side, and we spoke no more until the general good-night took place, and the men went off to the billiard-room, and my own sex to their couches. Once more I courtesied to Miss Rivers in the cheval-glass, and told her she had surpassed my most sanguine expectations. Then, in a very happy frame of mind, I went to bed.

CHAPTER III.

Very promising, too, were the events of the next day. I felt that the man I hated was paying me attention above my fellows. Of course, it was not marked enough to attract notice, but attention it was, undoubtedly. He walked with me, and told me, among other things, a great deal about his early life and struggles for success. He was quite interesting, so much so, that I wished I could check these confidences. I feared that his talk might awaken a suspicion of sympathy in my mind, which would grievously interfere with my vendetta.

That evening, he repeated his request that I would sing; but after the way in which I had misled him, I knew he only urged me for the sake of politeness. I began with one of those little ballads which he so much disliked; an easy, simple little thing, which could only be borne out of the commonplace by feeling on the part of the singer. I glanced at him as I finished the song. He thanked me quietly, but I saw he looked puzzled. Then I placed Beethoven's "Adelaide" before me, and sang it as I had seldom or never before sang it—entirely to my own satisfaction. I rose from the piano, and our eyes met. He did not join in the chorus of thanks; but I knew he was more than moved; and as he followed me to my chair, I exulted, as I thought that the pet weapon in my armory had struck well home.

"Miss Rivers," he said, "I thought no amateur in England could sing that song to her own accompaniment as you sing it. I can only congratulate you, while blaming you for deceiving me so, last night."

I thanked him for his compliments; and for the rest of the evening Mr. Hope talked little except to me.

There!—I will write no more about it. Now, I am utterly ashamed of it all. Had it not been for my resolve to reject it when offered, I would have stooped to win no man's love—not even Vincent Hope's. But in five days I knew that my work was done—and fully done—so fully, that I dreaded the result of it, and began to wish I had not been so vindictive. Worse than all, friends—as friends will—were exchanging knowing glances, and commenting on the relations which appeared to exist between my foe and myself.

Could I have conquered my nature, and decided to forego my revenge, it was now impossible to do so. For my own sake, matters must come to a climax, that all might see how little I cared for the man.

One night, as I sat in my dressing-gown over the fire, trying to make up my mind to tear myself from the pleasant glow and get into bed, Mabel Lighton entered my room. She was a good true girl, who spoke her mind freely, and at times lectured even me.

"Heritage," she said abruptly, "what do you mean to do with Vincent Hope?"

I could not for the life of me help changing color, and was compelled to shield the cheek nearest Mabel with the fan which had been protecting my eyes from the firelight.

"Do with him! I don't know what you mean."

"Yes, you do," retorted my mentor. "Had it been any one but you, Heritage, I should have called her a flirt. But you are not a flirt, we know."

"What have I done, Mabel?" I asked. The screen was still between us.

Mabel quietly pushed it aside; then, placing her hands on my shoulders, scrutinized my face in a most uncomfortable manner.

"You have done this, and who can wonder at it? You have gained that man's love entirely. But, although it seems so unlike you, I believe you have brought him to your feet for vanity's sake. Heritage, he is a good man—a proud man. If you mean to give him nothing in return, I should say his life will be wrecked. Do you love him, or are my fears well founded?"

In some fashion, I was bound to reply. I sought refuge in levity.

"When I am moved to confess my sins, Mabel, it will not be to you, but to some nice ascetic High-Church curate."

"Don't talk nonsense. I am in bitter earnest. Vincent Hope will surely ask you to be his wife. You are rich, and he is comparatively poor; but I know that will not influence you. Only I say again, if you refuse, you are to blame for all that happens."

This must be stopped at any cost. Until now, I had always believed that hysterics and affectation were synonymous.

"Mabel," I said, "I hate Vincent Hope; but at this moment I think I hate you even more! Go to bed. I am too tired to say another word; so go away."

There with, I got into bed, turned my face to the wall, and left Mabel to put out my candle and get back to her own quarters when she thought fit.

I was annoyed and ashamed. She had nearly accused me of what I had in truth been guilty of—making love to my enemy. As people noticed my conduct, it became more and more necessary that I should clear myself from all such imputations. This could be done in one way only.

Perhaps I had the grace to avoid Vincent Hope somewhat during the next two days. Perhaps that very avoidance hastened the catastrophe. But on the third day, chance—pure chance, mind—left us together and alone. For a moment there was silence between us; then he drew near to me, and said in a quiet earnest voice:

"Heritage, I love you. Will you be my wife?"

I could not answer. All I could do was to prevent myself breaking into hysterical laughter.

He tried to take my hand.

"Heritage, my darling, I think I loved you the moment I saw you. Look up, and answer me. Say you love me, and will be my wife?"

His wife! After hating him for so long—after Mabel's reproaches—after winning his love in a way the thought of which made me blush! Never, never, never!

So I steeled myself—drew myself up to every inch of my height—looked him full in the face—triumphed, and took my revenge. I hope and think I spoke composedly, if not coldly.

"Mr. Hope, you honor me greatly, but it cannot be. Please never mention it again."

His face was very pale; and when an expression of positive pain left it, grew stern, almost hard. My manner must have convinced him I was in earnest. No doubt, had I wished to do so, I could have made him fall at my feet and plead passionately. But then, unless one is an utter savage, vindictiveness must be limited. I had done enough.

Perhaps, under such trying circumstances, no man could have behaved in a more dignified manner than did Mr. Hope.

"I am to understand," he said calmly but with a look in his eyes which I dared not meet—"I am to understand—you do not love me?"

I bowed.

"Please let me hear you say so," he said.

"I do not. Let us say no more about it. I think I will go back to the house now."

We walked in silence until we were close to the gates. Then he said:

"Unless my presumption to-day makes my presence unbearable to you, I shall stay two days longer, as I promised Mr. Lighton. It is not worth while to set people inquiring as to the reason for a hasty departure."

"Certainly not," I answered. "Stay as long as you wish; or, if you prefer it, I will leave."

"That is out of the question," he replied, as we crossed the threshold and parted.

I went to my room—to exult, of course, in my revenge. It was so full, so complete, so exactly as I planned it. And writers and poets say that revenge is sweet. Oh yes, it was very, very sweet—so sweet, that I double-locked the door, that no one might see how much I enjoyed it—so sweet that I threw myself on my bed, and thought my heart must break as I sobbed and wept; for the truth must be told—I loved Vincent Hope even as he said, and as I hoped he loved me. Yet, for the sake of vanity, I had to-day rejected the love of a man, the best, the noblest, the cleverest in the world! I had hurled my hoarded stone, and right well it had fulfilled its mission; but its rebound had crushed me. Oh yes; revenge is very sweet!

[Concluded next week.

"You have plenty of reading here," said a visitor to the literary editor, pointing to a pile of books on the editorial desk. "These are not for reading," replied the editor, "they are for reviewing."

A Boston man has invented a sash-lifter for use on steam cars. If it works he ought to have heavy royalties and a gold medal.

Jack's Lesson.

"He positively neglects you, Nannie; I wonder you stand it."

"I love him so Lena."

Lena Blair touched the light brown hair of her brother's betrothed very tenderly; but a shade of annoyance crossed her fine, haughty face.

"You love him far too well, little one," said she, rapidly. "If you were not so willing to accept any sort of treatment from him I'm sure he would not act as he does. Now, last night at the hop I saw your pretty eyes turning toward him wherever he was—and he wasn't very near you often; I noticed that, too—full of the most transparent devotion. Why didn't you do as he was doing? He was deep in a flirtation with Nell Glynn. Why didn't you try the same amusement? You might find it as pleasant as he did, or seemed to; and when Roy Lexon tried to be civil to you you actually snubbed him! Oh, you little goose! So long as you submit to this sort of thing, so long you will find it will continue. You are too patient, dear. I am sure you never say a word to Jack about his flirtations, do you, Nannie?"

The pretty gray eyes fell, and a flickering color, sweet as that of the wild primrose, came and went in Nannie May's cheek. It was a very dainty and flower-like face that Lena watched so closely, yet with a touch of impatience in her own dark eyes.

"I couldn't say anything unpleasant to him, Lena," she said, softly; "and I'm sure he loves me best, always."

"Of course he does; but his conduct sometimes pains you. I know it does."

There was a slight contraction of the low, white forehead and a sudden quiver of the girlish lips as she said, simply:

"Sometimes." Then she added hastily: "I know he doesn't intend to make me miserable. He does it all in thoughtlessness, Lena, dear."

"Then it's about time you taught him to consider a little. Your patience will make a confirmed flirt of him."

"What can I do? I never quarrel with Jack. It would kill me. Lena, if I spoke to him at all on this subject I know I would cry."

"And then he would kiss you and call you silly and jealous without reason; and you would ask his pardon; and—he would flirt more than ever."

"Well, what is there for me to do?"

"Make him jealous."

"I never could; but I'm no flirt, and I love Jack too well to make him miserable."

"And Jack ought to love you too well to want to make you miserable."

"He doesn't think."

"Then teach him to think!" impatiently. "I have a plan, Nannie, which will work splendidly if you put it in execution. Sandy Anderson comes here to-morrow. You know him?"

"Oh, very well, indeed! He is an old friend, in fact."

"Well, a secret. He is—is my lover. We are betrothed."

"Lena, dear?" with a girlish delight, "I never even suspected. Let me kiss you. Does Jack know?"

"No, you child! Do you forget the old feud between them, since one—I forgot which—gave the other a good drubbing at college? And Jack isn't to know just yet, either. I told you Sandy comes to-morrow. Let me lay my plan before you and see if there is not more of the comic than tragic in my play."

They were walking slowly along the beach within sight of the hotel at which both were guests. Both were with their parents at Atlantic City, spending a very delightful summer by "the sad seawaves."

Jack Blair had joined the party two weeks before, and still had four weeks left of the vacation given him generously by his senior partner in their Baltimore bank.

The two girls talked for some time, and when they had finished, both were laughing heartily. While their faces were yet dimpling with mirth they came suddenly upon a couple sitting on the sands, in the very agreeable—to them—depths of an animated conversation. They had a huge light sunshade over them, and the young man—none other than Jack Blair himself—was quite pronounced in his desire to protect his companion's complexion from the sun, while he was industriously swaying a great fan to and fro, quite near, in fact, almost tenderly near the pretty, petulant, pink and white face of Nell Glynn, said to be one of the most unscrupulous and industrious flirts, and certainly enjoying her sojourn by the sea.

Lena and Nannie nodded to them and passed on. Lena laughed mischievously.

"Strike just such an attitude some time for his benefit," she said, and blushed a deep red, but smiled a little also.

The next evening there was to be a pleasant hop at a neighboring hotel, and Jack had promised to escort Lena and Nannie.

He was waiting for them as he had promised, on the terrace, when his sister approached him alone.

"Isn't Nannie ready?" he asked. "Everything has gone; Miss Glynn and her mother went half an hour ago."

"And Nannie has been gone more than half an hour," Lena responded easily.

"With her mother? I understood Mrs. May was not going."

"She is in the parlor. Nannie went with Mr. Anderson."

Jack started.

"She was to go without us."

"I told you so, but I was mistaken, you see. We will be late, Jack."

Jack offered his arm, and led his sister across the terrace and along the sands looking a trifle grave.

"Nannie will be the belle to-night, I'm positive," Lena continued cheerfully. "She looked beautiful in a satin, white dress, with pearls on her arms. If I were you, Jack, I'd be a little bit afraid. You see, Sandy Anderson has admired Nannie for a long time, and he is so very agreeable and so handsome—rather handsomer than you are, my dear brother."

"A fop and a fool!" Jack exclaimed disgustedly, and Lena only smiled.

They were late, and found the floor filled with waltzers.

While they stood watching the circling couplets Nannie floated by, light as a zephyr, fair as a flower, held by Sandy Anderson, whose head was bent—rather too tenderly, it seemed to Jack—over the fair one of the girl.

She was smiling shyly, and as her eyes met those of her betrothed she flushed, in what struck him as being a guilty manner.

Then the other waltzers hid them. Jack, with a most unaccountable sense of injury upon him, stood moodily near the doorway, although Miss Glynn had sent a signal across the room to him.

As the hours went on he found it impossible to get near enough to Nannie to say even a word to her; and this was so unusual that he felt confused, injured, indignant, and angry altogether.

Miss May had certainly been a belle that night, and Sandy Anderson had been her constant attendant.

When Jack walked back to their hotel with Lena he was perfectly silent and his sister asked him at last how he liked the hop.

"It was a beastly bore," he said, half savagely.

"Didn't Nannie look lovely?" she pursued.

"Ask Anderson," was the civil answer. "He never took his eyes off her all night."

"I don't think he ever cared for anybody else," Lena said unblushingly. "I pity the poor fellow."

And Jack tugged very savagely at his mustache.

The following morning, directly after breakfast, he was standing on the terrace, with Nannie and Mr. Anderson crossed it on their way to the beach.

They did not return until lunch hour, and he noticed how bright and pretty the girl looked in her white flannel dress and broad sun hat; and he had been no more particular about the preservation of Miss Glynn's complexion than seemed Sandy about his companion's.

In the afternoon they—Nannie and Anderson—went driving on the sands. In the evening they sang duets in the parlor; and when they had finished Jack heard a picnic planned for the following day, to which Sandy asked Miss May if he might be her escort, and she smilingly assented.

Then Jack became blindly, insanely jealous, and he sent Lena to induce his betrothed to go for a turn on the terrace.

He followed Lena, and then, when Jack had drawn her arm through his, Lena left them and went in, and Jack commenced upbraiding his pretty love until he had melted her to tears.

Surely Nannie May would never have become a queen of tragedy, for she owned to everything then and there, and dried her tears on Jack's broad bosom, and she even informed him of his sister's engagement in her excited confusion.

"Lena thought you neglected me, and that I took it too meekly; so she arranged and planned it all," she sobbed. "She thought you might not spend so much of your time with Miss Glynn if you knew how badly I felt about your doing so, and she bade me try to make you jealous. But you are not angry, Jack? You are not angry at me?"

His anger didn't seem so very terrible, for he kissed her.

"Lena ought to be ashamed of herself," he declared; "and I think I'll forgive Anderson all old scores. He'll not find life full of flowers if he becomes my brother-in-law. But, my pet, you ought not to think of being jealous of Miss Glynn, nor anybody else. There is no girl in the whole world so sweet and lovable as yourself; and even Lena shall not say I neglect you hereafter."

"And you're not jealous?"

"Of a fellow like Anderson? Nonsense, dear!"

But he had been very jealous.

The Election in Virginia.

From the chaos of Virginia politics the figure of Fitzhugh Lee, marshalling a phantom army of his uncle's "boys in grey," appears and calls upon Virginians to make him their Governor because he is a nephew of Robert E. Lee and consequently the best of Democrats. On the other hand, John S. Wise, the son of the Virginia Governor who hung John Brown, appears without a cavalcade of grey-suited soldiers, but simply as a Republican candidate, who recognizes the race for which John Brown died as free men who have a right to vote and have their votes counted in the honest Republican fashion. The contest between the two parties respectively represented by Lee and Wise is one the issue of which concerns the Nation as well as the State. Lee, as the Bourbon candidate, represents above all things the pro-slavery Democracy, stripped of its slave-property, but hating the Union and the party that saved it. Wise represents the principles of progress which have made the greatness of the Nation and will, if allowed, make the greatness of Virginia. These principles are advancing in the State, and at such a rate that the Bourbon Democratic leaders are alarmed lest the election next month should go in favor of the Republicans. Hence the military style of Fitzhugh Lee's late campaigning, which appeals to the vulgar taste of ignorant voters, white and black, and which, it is hoped, may save Virginia to the Democracy.

Observers in other States have not expected a Republican victory in Virginia this fall. The vote of last November was emphatically in favor of the Democracy, and President Cleveland and his Postmaster General have been filling offices by hundreds, each one being made a new Democratic headquarters, in which party plans are arranged. But the Republicans of the State are working bravely, and they have been encouraged to better work by the result of the Ohio election; so that there is a good chance of Republican success; of the election of Wise as Governor and a Republican majority in the Legislature. If there is a full vote, of blacks as well as whites, if the election is honestly conducted and if the ballots are honestly counted, such a Republican victory is assured. It is possible that all this many be effected, but nobody familiar with past elections in Virginia can be willing to bet on it. Without betting or bragging, let us wish success to the Republican cause. Its triumph will lighten the difficulties in providing for the terrible debt under which the State staggers; but above all it will split the Solid Democratic South in a vital part. This is the national aspect of the question to be settled next month. The citizens who have to settle it are, however, most interested in their local affairs, which require caution and wise statesmanship, such as has not been found in Democratic administrations since the old times of Jefferson and Madison. No one can say positively how the election will go. But let us hope for Republican victory; meanwhile adopting the usual finishing phrase of "Father Ritchie" in his cautious editorials in the old Richmond Enquirer—"Nous Verrons.

Getting Down to Their Christian Names.

San Francisco Chronicle.

Did you ever listen to a young couple working up to that point of affectionate intimacy at which they call one another by their Christian names?

"It has been a lovely party, hasn't it, Miss Jackson?"

"Lovely, Mr. Wilkins."

"I have known you a long time, Miss Jackson."

"And I have known you quite a while."

"I've often heard my sister speak of you."

"And my brother is always talking about you."

"Is he? I hear so much about you that I feel quite at home with you."

"It's such a lovely night, isn't it, Mr. Wilkins?"

"Beautiful. I think Edith's such a pretty name."

"Do you? I don't like it."

"Edith."

"What did you say?"

"Oh, nothing; I was only repeating the name."

"I don't like all men's names. I like some. I like Phil and Ferdinand and—"

"What do think of George?"

"That's your name. George!"

"I beg your pardon."

"Oh, nothing; I was only repeating the name."

"What a lovely night it is, isn't it, Miss Edith?"

"Oh, there! George Wilkins, what did you let me slip on the cobblestone for?"

"'Pon my word, I didn't do it, Miss Edith."

"Well, we are at home, or I am, Mr. George!"

"I'm very sorry."

"So am I. I'm so much obliged to you for your escort; I've had such a lovely time."

"And so have I."

"Good night, Mr. Wilkins."

"Good night, Miss Jackson."

"Good night."

"Good night."

"Good night—Edith."

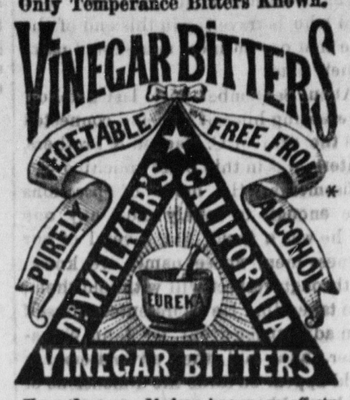
"Good night—George."

The Little Girl's Reply.

I saw an exquisite story that Richard Grant White used to tell so mangled by a newspaper the other day that I was moved to do it justice by printing my recollection of it. It was told to show the native courtesy of well-bred Americans, and here it is: When Gen. Washington was in New England he was entertained at dinner by a country gentleman, who lived comfortably and quietly in his old-fashioned home far from town. When the General rose to go, the little daughter of the host, not yet in her teens, opened the door for him. As he passed out in his stately way he bowed and said to the little maid: "I wish you a better office, my dear." "Yes, sir," she quickly resplied with a bow. "To let you in, sir."

Medical, Etc.

Only Temperance Bitters Known.



No other medicine known so effectually purges the blood of deep-seated diseases.

Millions bear testimony to its wonderful curative effects.

It is a purely Vegetable Preparation, made from the native herbs and roots of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol.

It removes the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health.

It is the great Blood Purifier and Life-giving Principle; a Gentle Purgative and Tonic; a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the power of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to.

The Alterative, Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Anti-Bilious, Solvent, Diuretic and Tonic properties of VINEGAR BITTERS exceed those of any other medicine in the world.

No person can take the BITTERS according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Bilious, Remittent, Intermittent and Malarial Fevers, are prevalent throughout the United States, particularly in the valleys of our great rivers and their vast tributaries during the Summer and Autumn, especially during seasons of unusual heat and dryness.

These Fevers are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these organs, is absolutely necessary.

There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to Dr. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as it will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus forearmed.

It Invigorates the Stomach and stimulates the torpid Liver and Bowels, cleansing the blood of all impurities, imparting life and vigor to the frame, and carrying off without the aid of Calomel, or other minerals, all poisonous matter from the system.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Pneumonia, Dizziness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are at once relieved by VINEGAR BITTERS.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, the Bitters have no equal. In these, as in all constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS has shown its great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to Paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take occasional doses of VINEGAR BITTERS.

Skin Diseases, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Ulcers, Swellings, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations, Humors and diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of the Bitters.

Pin, Tape and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like VINEGAR BITTERS.

Measles, Scarlet Fever, Mumps, Whooping Cough, and all children's diseases may be made less severe by keeping the bowels open with mild doses of the Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, this Bitters has no equal.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood when its impurities burst through the skin in Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when, and the health of the system will follow.

In conclusion: Give the Bitters a trial. It will speak for itself. One bottle is a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Around each bottle are full directions printed in different languages.

Fish Testifies.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The county court house was crowded this morning with people anxious to gain admittance to the court room of oyer and terminer, where Ferdinand Ward is on trial.

Benjamin Fish, the paying teller of the Marine bank, was recalled to the stand, and Ward listened attentively as he read off the amount of deposits made by himself and the firm of Grant & Ward. Some of the deposits ranged in the hundreds of thousands. General Tracy demanded that certain books be produced, and they not being at hand he asked for time to examine them. "I don't propose to delay this case," was the answer of the judge, "and you will have to get the books the best way you can."

In his testimony Paying Teller Fish said: "On April 26, 1884, Grant & Ward had a balance of $46,000, and in the morning of May 2d the balance was $804,702.62. On May 2d Ward was raising money for the bank and he managed the deposits." By consent of counsel, the sheets from which these statements were given by the witness were admitted as evidence, in regard to overdrafts. Grant & Ward had two accounts, one special and the other general. Ward had an individual account and drew against the three. The sheets of the accounts were also admitted as evidence. Ward had spoken to witness about the purpose of his special account, but testimony on that point was ruled out upon the objection, and the witness was excused.

General Tracy then read a number of letters from Fish to Ward, all being requests for money advanced by the bank to Grant & Ward, and to Ward individually. They indicate that the bank was accustomed to allow Ward to overdraw his accounts to large amounts One of them read:

"I suppose we can stand it a day longer, but I am afraid there is trouble ahead. I am not at all anxious to get into the Erie, and am sorry that he said anything about it. If you know of some acceptable man who wants to be president of a small bank down the street I can find a place for him."

Yours, J. D. F.

Ready for War.

CONSTANTINOPLE, October 26.—Military preparations are being pushed vigorously. A large contract has just been signed for torpedoes and electric lights. The Russian ambassador frequently visits the sultan's palace, and it is stated that he is on the best of terms with the sultan. It is generally believed that the Czar of Russia is ready to insist on Turkish occupation of English Roumelia if the union of the latter province with Bulgaria can be prevented in no other way.

Important communications have recently passed between the sultan and King Milan. It is stated that the king of Servia has been told by the sultan that the porte would be in no way displeased to see the Servian army attack Bulgaria, provided that Eastern Roumelian territory were respected. A dispatch from Athens says the war fever is high, the excitement being so great that the government will undoubtedly be compelled to enter Macedonia or be overthrown.

Burning old School Desks.

SPRINGFIELD, Penn., Oct. 26.—The taxpayers of Warwick, this county, are excited over the burning of the school furniture. Application had been made for new furniture, but the directors refused to incur the expense. On Friday the County Superintendent visited the school, and in the course of his remarks alluded to the shabby condition of the furniture, and that it was only fit for kindling wood. At the close of the exercises the male pupils put their heads together and decided to bring the School Board to terms. On Saturday evening they met near the school, forced open the door and carried the desks, etc., to an adjoining field, where they piled them up in a heap. A match was applied and a few minutes later the old benches and desks which were used by their fathers and grandfathers were destroyed.

Passengers Injured.

LAPORTE, Ind., October 26.—The rear car of a passenger train on the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific line, was thrown from the track to-day by a broken rail and the following persons were injured: Conductor O'Brien, leg badly sprained; Mrs. Sarah M. Bascomb, Muskegan, Mich., contusion of head and bruised arm; W. B. Wheelock, Chicago, bruised badly about the head, face and shoulders; Mrs. Henrietta De Hart, Valparaiso, Ind., right arm and hand badly sprained; N. Sullivan, Michigan City, rib broken; Mrs. Alice McDaniel and three children, of Walkerton, Ind., all badly injured.

A Great Storm.

HALIFAX, Oct. 27.—A great storm raged off the coast of Labrador, doing much damage among the fishing fleet gathered there. Eighty vessels were wrecked and at least seventy men were lost. Two thousand persons are now ashore in a destitute condition. The news created great excitement here. Steamers will be immediately dispatched to the scene of the disaster with provisions, clothing and other comforts for the castaways.

Reading's Statement.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26.—The statement of business of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad and coal and iron companies for September, 1885, as compared with the same month of 1884, shows a decrease in the net earnings of $76,500. The ten months to September 30, 1885, as compared with the same period for 1884, shows a decrease in net earnings of $1,220,049.

The South Penn.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 24.—Argument in the South Pennsylvania litigation was concluded to-day.

Mr. B. M. Nead, for the state, urged that the lines were parallel even if not competitors, and hence the merger was prohibited.

O. S. Sellers, for the Pennsylvania railroad company, in a highly technical argument, contended that the constitution did not and could not prohibit the sale of stocks and bonds. He drew distinctions between the control of the franchise. He claimed that a projected railroad could not be considered a railroad till completed. He insisted that the charter of the Pennsylvania company was granted before the new constitution was adopted, and could not be changed by that instrument.

The court remarked that the questions was who had purchased the road and was the purchase legal. Mr. Sellers must confine himself to those points.

Mr. Sellers then insisted that the South Pennsylvania was not a competing line.

L. D. Gilbert, for the South Pennsylvania, argued that the company did not sell a railroad, but simply the right to complete a projected road.

Attorney General Cassidy closed the argument. He dwelt on the course of the negotiations, maintained that the Pennsylvania company and the Pennsylvania railroad company were identical, and denied that the charter of the Pennsylvania company protected it against the constitution. He said the real question was whether these great corporations were beyond and above the constitution and whether the people have no chance against money and power in their own courts.

At the conclusion of Mr. Cassidy's argument the court took the testimony and papers and reserved its decision.

The Champion Beaten.

ALBANY, Oct. 24.—Probably ten thousand persons witnessed the great single scull race, for $1,000 a side, at Pleasure Island, this afternoon, between Edward Hanlan, of Toronto, and John H. Teemer, of McKeesport. The weather and water were nearly perfect. There was a three foot freshet in the river, however, which rendered it hard work for the oarsmen going to the stake boat. The race was three miles, with a turn. In the betting Hanlan was a high favorite, and many private wagers were laid on him at odds of $100 to $90. In the pools sold on the island just before the start the Canadian sold first choice at $50 to $25 and $30 even after Teemer had won the toss for choice of positions. Teemer selected the inside position, which was a considerable advantage.

At 4.30 the men were ordered out by Referee James F. Organder, of Boston. At 4.53 the word was given. Both men were in fine condition. Hanlan got a trifle the best of the start, rowing 36 to Teemer's 34 strokes to the minute. Passing the boat houses on the island, an eighth of a mile from the start, Hanlan had the nose of his boat to the front, but was glancing nervously over at his rival, as though he feared him. The race was decided before the scullers had gone half a mile. Soon after leaving the quarter mile point Teemer by grand work drew upon his rival and took the lead, which he never afterwards surrendered.

The official time was 21.13.

The G. A. R. and Quay.

The following dispatch was sent from this place, Monday morning, to the city papers:

BELLEFONTE, PA., Oct. 26, 1885

Austin Curtin, Department Commander of the G. A. R., of Pennsylvania, has issued an order denouncing the attempt of a few persons at New Castle, Lawrence county, to use that organization in the interest of Quay. Dept. Commander Curtin says, that although a Republican, he denounces any such an effort as an outrage upon the organization that should be openly rebuked by its members and that Grand Army men everywhere should protest against such a use being made of the society. He further states that the persons using the badge of the order for any such purpose are knowingly violating its rules and doing it an injury that cannot be repaired. As an organization, the G. A. R. takes no stock in QUAY or any other candidate.

Commuted to Life Imprisonment.

Special to DAILY NEWS.

HARRISBURG, October 27, 11 o'clock a. m.—The Board of Pardons to-day commuted the death sentence of Curtin McClain to imprisonment for life. McClain was tried for the murder of William Smearman, at Newton Hamilton camp-meeting in August of last year, and found guilty of murder in the first degree. The 19th day of November was the day appointed for his execution, but the most strenuous efforts were made to have this sentence commuted. These efforts succeeded this morning.

Curtin McClain's Case.

HARRISBURG, October 26.—A special session of the Pardon Board was held this afternoon to consider the case of Curtin McClain, of Mifflin county, sentenced to be hung next month. The affidavits of six new witnesses were presented in his defence and strong pleas were made for the commutation of the sentence. The newly discovered evidence was, however, of such conflicting character and was offset to such an extent by the prosecuting attorney that the board decided to hold the case for further consideration.

Italians Called On.

SHARON, Pa., October 26.—The laborers employed at the Sharon water works struck this afternoon for an advance in wages of twenty cents per day. The contractors refused to grant the increase, and telegraphed to Cleveland for one hundred Italians to take their places. Serious trouble is anticipated, as the strikers say they will not allow foreigners to go to work.

All Holding Revivals.

PITTSBURG, October 27.—All Evangelical denominations are holding day and night services in nearly all the churches in Pittsburg and Allegheny. The movement is an outgrowth of the Moody and Sankey meetings last spring.

Interceding for Riel.

OTTAWA, Ont., October 26.—A number of conservative members of parliament have arrived here to intercede for Riel. The date to which Riel has been respited is November 10.

Injury to an Infant.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 26.—The infant child of George Westinghouse, of air brake fame, has sustained injuries that may maim it for life. A servant girl accidentally dropped it to the floor The child was born in the Hotel Brunswick, New York, some ten months ago, and, under the name of "George the Third,"—its father is now Sir George Westinghouse, having been knighted by the King of Belgium—has been the pet of society. At the baptismal ceremony recently the robe of white satin and point lace ornamented with pearl in which the babe was dressed created a nine-days wonder among the mothers of this neighborhood. Mrs. Westinghouse has taken the little one to Philadelphia and placed it under the treatment of an eminent physician there.

Home Missionary Work.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—At to-day's meeting of the general Board of Managers of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Mrs. Rutherford B. Hayes occupied the chair. The first auxiliary of the New York conference was formed in March. There are at present nine auxiliaries. Amount received, $36,243. At the afternoon session the subjects discussed were: "Work Among the Illiterate Whites," "The Savannah Work," and "The Work in the South."

War Ships.

NEW YORK, October 27.—Secretary Whitney has gone back to Washington. He saw the assignees of John Roach yesterday, and consulted with them as to the completion of the unfinished war ships. It was decided that the assignees should go to Washington, there to meet the present naval advisory board and arrange for completing the Atlanta, Boston and Chicago. The first meeting will be held either this afternoon or to-morrow morning.

Mrs. Grant Greatly Grieved.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—The widow of General Grant has been greatly grieved and pained by the public discussion of the domestic affairs of her daughter, Mrs. Sartoris. The Public Ledger is authorized to say that all reports to the effect that Mrs. Sartoris has applied or contemplates applying for a divorce or separation from her husband are entirely without foundation and cruel wounds to her feeling.

Had a Large Time.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 27.—Eighty lodges, representing the states of Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan and West Virginia, met here to-day to celebrate the seventeenth anniversary of the organization of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. The mayor welcomed them. Speeches were made, a parade given and the day was brought to a close by a banquet, concert and ball.

To Travel on Sunday.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—It is said at the white house this afternoon that the president will leave Washington Sunday morning and proceed direct to Buffalo where he will cast his vote for the democratic state ticket and return direct to Washington, arriving here on Wednesday evening or Thursday morning.

A Pennsylvanian Appointed.

WASHNGTON, Oct. 26.—Jacob F. Klugh, of Pennsylvania, has been appointed special examiner in the pension office.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS.

A Letter from Tyrone which Gives Items all along the Line.

TYRONE, Oct. 26, 1885.

F. B. Freeman, train dispatcher of Tyrone division, has returned and resumed work after an extended visit through the East. He looks well.

The M. E. church walls are rising rapidly.

Conrad's new house is completed.

Rev. C. A. Biddle, of Port Matilda, purchased the Col. Galbraith horse from George McLain. The animal is full-blooded.

B. K. Bonine has moved into his new building. The operating room will be completed about the 11th of November. It will be the finest in Central Pennsylvania.

While here I took occasion to call on A. L. Koons, an old acquaintance. I found that he has greatly enlarged the business he was in when first coming to town. Harry has purchased the property No. 5 Juniata St. He proposes keeping the stock for the filling of wholesale orders, in this store room, and has designated it the wholesale department. It is a large room, 50 feet deep, well lighted, etc. We congratulate Harry and hope for success.

S. D. Ray, Esq., of Bellefonte, called on us in our office, accompanied by Hon. John W. Cooke, the lumber king of Blair.

The Republicans are more than "whooping 'em up" for the county ticket, especially for sheriff, who is Mr. Graham Meadville, a gentlemen well known by many of your citizens.

The M. E. church at Bald Eagle Furnace has been painted at last after standing 23 years. The paint was furnished by your distinguished townsmen, Harry K. Hicks & Bro. They furnished the Longman and Martinez paint, which has made a first-class job, and considering the condition of the building no paint could have done more; and no man could have put it on more skillfully than did Mr. O. C. Galbraith, of Fowler. The trustees return their many thanks to Hicks & Bro. for favors shown in donations to the church, and wish for them unlimited success.

BALD EAGLE.

—Mr. W. I. Fleming, the tailor, is making arrangements to enlarge his business and to associate with him as partner, a Williamsport gentleman named Thompson. The business establishment will be moved into the store room in E. C. Humes' building vacated by Louis Doll.

To Our Merchants.

The Curwensville Herald gives the following information in reference to a fraud who is traveling in this end of the State that our business men should paste in their hats:

"About September 15th last a fellow representing himself as being connected with the firm of C. Hackett & Brothers, printers, was in this place soliciting advertisements. His mode of operations were enough to satisfy most any one that he was a fraud, but several of our business men, whose names we know, but through respect will withhold them, were taken in. He represented himself as an advertising agent for John Wanamaker, and said the advertisements would appear on cards the dimensions of which would be about three feet by two feet with John Wanamaker reserving the centre of the card. The price was one dollar per square and each subscriber was to receive one hundred cards for distribution, one of which was to be nicely framed and covered with glass to hang in his place of business. All express charges were to be paid and any damage done to frame or glass was to be repaired by Hackett & Bros. These cards were to have been here in time for the county fair as they were to contain an "ad" for that association as well as the business men of Clearfield, but as yet have not put in an appearance. We would advise our readers to keep a look out for this schemer."

—There are some boardwalks—and that, too, in front of the most elegant residences in Bellefonte—that are in great need of repair.

SPECIAL MENTION.

—Emperor William, of Germany, on Monday, made this public declaration to to Court Chaplain Kogel: "In these my latter days, I call heaven to witness that I have always considered religion the only foundation upon which depends everything. It is the highest possession of my people."

A Millionaire.

"All the health I enjoy, and even my life, I may say, is in consequence of Simmons Liver Regulator. I would not take $1,000,000 for my interest in that medicine.

W. H. WILSON,
Lecturer Florida State Grange."

Millions of us are bilious. We are a bilious race. Half of us are born bilious, with a predisposition to dyspepsia. The best known remedy for biliousness and indigestion is Simmons Liver Regulator. It has stood the test of time.

—The delivery wagon of Valentines' Store Co., Lim., with a heavy load inside and Mr. Mitchell Gardner as driver, was seen upon the streets Sunday. The "heavy load" was Mr. Moyer and they were off for a drive.

Fall and winter WOOLENS just received. LEAVE YOUR ORDER NOW AND SAVE MONEY. MONTGOMERY & Co., Tailors.

—We saw the substantial, businesslike 'Squire Corman, of Rebersburg, in town Monday, but as he was in a hurry we didn't stop him to ask about the prospects for a Quay majority in his native burg.

A Card.

Owing to our store having been so crowded during the opening, that many went away without having been waited upon, we have decided to make every Monday and Saturday for the next four (4) weeks—Special Bargain Day. We will add to our long list of Sledge Hammers upon Saturday, Oct. 24th, 100 doz. Ladies Merino and all wool Seamless Cashmere Hose, of superior quality, Solid Colors at 25 cts. per pair, 1 lot Jersey caps at 15 ct. each. GOLDSMITH BROTHERS,

—See the "daisy" advertisement of S. & A. Loeb which appears to-day. It is a fitting advertisement for such an elegant store as the Messrs. Loeb now have, and they offer attractions and bargains that are remarkable.

One of the most melancholy spectacles in the world is a human being shattered and broken down by the use of ardent spirits. But the dilapidation may be repaired, the human ruin strengthened and restored to perfect soundness by a course of that most powerful of all vegetable invigorants, Dr. Walker's Vinegar Bitters.

—Theresa Mills, who died in the Cambria county alms house a few days ago, had been an inmate of that institution for nearly twenty-nine years.

If you would diminish infantile nervous diseases, which always spring from an imperfectly nourished nervous system; if you would have your children healthy, strong and able to resist disease, give them brain food, Vitalized Phosphites. For sale by druggists.

—Hog cholera is raging in Morris and Porter townships, Huntingdon county, and has already sent about two hundred porkers to premature graves.

Pure blood is absolutely necessary in order to enjoy perfect health. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood and strengthens the system.

—A letter in the post office addressed "Miss Nannie Armstrong, in the care of Jane A. Dull, Burkettsville, Freddrick," is awaiting better directions.

A Cure at Last.—Ely's Cream Balm goes more directly than any other catarrh remedy to the seat of the disease, and has resulted in more cures here than all others.—Wilkes-barre, Pa. Leader.

My son, aged nine years, was afflicted with catarrh, the use of Ely's Cream Balm effected a complete cure.—W. E. Hamman, Druggist, Easton, Pa. 43-4t

Miss Emma Snyder has returned from Philadelphia with the largest stock of millinery goods that has been brought here this Fall. There is no old stock on hand, but all is new. We invite the citizens of Bellefonte, Centre county, to call and examine goods. SNYDER SISTERS.

VIGOR

FOR THE

BRAIN

SYSTEM

CROSBY'S

VITALIZED

PHOS-PHITES

Composed of the Nerve giving Principles of the Ox-Brain and the Embryo of the Weat and Oat.

This is a standard preparation with all physicians who treat mental or nervous disorders. The formula is on every label. Its chemical composition is superintended by a professor of Chemistry.

As it is identical in its composition with brain matter, it is rapidly absorbed, and quickly relieves the depression from intellectual efforts, fatigue, loss of memory, or mental irritability.

Sleeplessness, irritation, nervous exhaustion, inability to work or study is but a brian-hunger—in urgent cases, brain starvation. This brain nutriment quickly feeds the hungry nerves and restores brain power. It is a cure for nervous disorders and debility in old or young.

BRAIN WORKERS NEED BRAIN FOOD.

Crosby's Vitalized Phos-phites should be taken as a Special Brain Food.

To build up worn out nerves, to banish sleeplessness, neuralgia and sick headache. I have not had a severe headache since I began its use, it was my great trouble before.—Dr. Guyan.

To promote good digestion.—Dr. Pilmore.

To "stamp out" consumption.—Dr. Churchill.

To "completely cure night sweats."—John B. Quigley.

To maintain the capabilities of the nerves to perform all functions even at the highest tension.—Bl. Treasure Trove.

To restore the energy lost by nervousness, debility, over exertion or enervated vital powers.—Dr. W. S. Wells.

To repair the nerves that have been enfeebled by worry, depression, anxiety or deep grief.—Miss Mary Rankin.

To strengthen the intellect so that study and deep mental application may be a pleasure and not a trial.—S. M. Crouch.

To develop good teeth, glossy hair, clear skin, handsome nails in the young, so that they may be an inheritance in later years.—Bl. School Journal.

To enlarge the capabilities for enjoyment.—National Journal of Education.

To "make life a pleasure" "not a daily suffering." "I really urge you to put it to the test."—Miss Emily Faithfol.

To amplify bodily and mental power to the present generation and "prove the survival of the fittest" to the next.—Bismarck

To restore lost powers and abilities.—Dr. Bull.

There is no other Vital Phos-phite, none that is extracted from living animal and vegetable tissues.

Philipsburg Again.

Mr. Al. Baney, of Bellefonte, now has full charge of the Potter House bar. Mr B. is a very obliging gentleman, and has made hosts of friends.

Samuel Cross, for a number of years deliveryman for G. Lyon & Co., this city, has resigned his position there and now drives for J. F. Barber & Co., hardware merchants.

Three of the thirteen new tenant houses on Pine street are now well under headway.

Mr. Harrison Stine, the boss horseman, is at present out of employment. A better deliveryman can't be found than Harrison, and he will accept a good situation. He was formerly of near Bellefonte.

W. L. Harper, of North Centre street, is the champion bee raiser of Centre county. He has taken from his hives over 600 pounds of honey this fall.

John Boyce, of Glen Hope, was in the city on Friday.

D. W. Holt, Esq., has returned from a visit to Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Frank Chase took in the sights of Johnstown the latter part of last week.

Mrs. R. M. Musser is enjoying a visit to friends in Lewistown.

Mr. Will E. Tyson, ticket, freight and telegraph agent at Stoneham, Warren county, is at present enjoying a visit among his many friends at his old home, this city.

Mr. John Gowland, the ever-efficient postmaster, is still to be found at his post. It will be a cold day, we think, when John will have to step down and out, as it is not an easy matter to get as good a man every day.

Mrs. Tozier's concert in opera house on Thursday night.

Lorenza Runk is once more able to resume his work for the electric light company. He is just the man for the position he occupies.

A new passenger train began running on the Vanderbilt railroad to-day (Monday).

The Journal still continues to tell big pumpkin yarns.

Mr. Elijah Brubaker, whose furniture was all destroyed by the burning of the house in which he lived the other day, has the sympathy of the entire thinking population of Philipsburg. It throws Mr. B. in rather bad shape. He is a hard working, sober and upright gentleman.

Go and hear the Ellis Bell Ringing Concert Co., in the new opera house, on Monday evening, Nov. 2. It is under the auspices of Jno. W. Geary Post, No. 90, of this city. It is for a good cause and no doubt will be well patronized. The troupe are highly recommended by everybody who have heard them.

Letter from Blaine in favor of Colonel Quay—He Predicts that He will be Elected by many Thousands!

In response to an invitation from Chairman Cooper to speak in Philadelphia during the last week of the canvass in behalf of Col. Quay and the Republican ticket, Mr. Blaine has sent the ollowing letter, viz:

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct 22, 1885.

Hon. Thos. V. Cooper, Chairman, &c.

My dear Sir: I would gladly come to Pennsylvania and say a word in response to your kind invitation if it were in the least degree necessary. But my engagements are of a kind that can not easily be laid aside, and Mr. Quay is sure to be elected by a majority of many thousands.

You will therefore I assume, readily excuse me.

In any canvass where my presence may be deemed advantageous the Republicans of Pennsylvania have the unlimited right to command me.

Very sincerly, yours,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

A Sunday School Offer.

The Centre County Sunday School Association offers, free of charge, a large and neatly printed Chart of the Beatitudes to every Sunday school in the county contributing one dollar to aid in defraying the expenses of the association.

The type of the chart is large enough to be seen in church. The chairman of the executive committee desires us to call the attention of superintendents to this, as it seems to be the only means for the association to meet its necessary expenses. This organization has done much for the encouragement of and improvement of Sunday schools in the county and should as it may be easily sustained. Any school can make profitable use of the chart and secure a copy at once by addressing C. C. S. S. A., Box 123, Bellefonte.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Works through the blood, regulating, toning and invigorating all the functions of the body.

Ringworm Humor and Salt-Rheum.

RAYNHAM, MASS., Aug. 12, 1878.

C. I. HOOD & Co.: Gentlemen— * * * * I have had ringworm humor and salt-rheum so badly that my body was covered with raw sores; so, also, my head and face. I have had any number of doctors in the last seven years, and none of them could cure me. One day my mother was in the city of Taunton, and found one of your cook books, and in reading it I found many people testifying to cures from the use of your Sarsaparilla and Olive Ointment. I felt forced to try it, although I had seen many things advertised that never did me any good. I have now taken two small bottles and one large one of Sarsaparilla, and used three boxes of Ointment. I now call myself cured. Nothing can be seen of the humor but the dim outlines of the sores. I shall take two more bottles, and then the cure will be complete.

I am gratefully yours,

EDGAR F. WHITMAN.

Biliousness, Sick Headache.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co.: Gents—Please send me by express two bottles HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA and a few Cook Books for distribution. Your preparation has worked wonders in the case of my wife, who has been troubled with sick headache and biliousness for years. She only took one-half teaspoonful at a dose, and has not been so well for five years as now. She found that within a week after taking it she felt very much better, and is now entirely free from those severe headaches. She has not taken any of any account since last spring, and what little she had is lent to do some others some good, and we must have it in the house.

Yours truly,

HOMER B. NASH.

The Railroad Case.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 23.—The argument in the South Pennsylvania railroad suit brought by the commonwealth failed to attract much attention when it began here this morning. At the outset it was agreed by the court to allow all interested to take part in the argument, but they would have to close it by to-morrow evening. Both Judges Simonton and McPherson were on the bench, and seated beside them was ex-Judge John J. Pearson.

The opening argument for the commonwealth was made by Deputy Attorney General Snodgrass. In beginning he said that the case was of great importance, as they would clearly show. The fourth section of the constitution, relative to the consolidation of competing lines of railroad, had been violated by the purchase, of the South Pennsylvania and Beech Creek railroads. Mr. Snodgrass then produced a large map, that had been specially prepared, showing the routes of the lines in competition, their connection, and how valuable they would be to the Pennsylvania system. With a small walking cane and the map swinging from the chandelier, he gave the court its first lesson in railroad geography.

Much interest was centered in the recital of the lines on the map, which was followed by a statement that the South Pennsylvania railroad at the present time was about two-fifth completed, and that there was no doubt that it had been intended as a competing line with the Pennsylvania, and a link for that system of roads west of Pittsburg not controlled by the alleged purchasers. In refering to the Beech Creek road, Mr. Snodgrass held it was certainly a competing road, and that its relation to the other roads of the state was of such a character as to be detrimental to the Pennsylvania, carrying, as it did, a vast quantity of bituminous coal.

As to the Beech Creek road, he argued that the object of the defense to bring in the Northern Central as purchasers was simply a pretense to avoid the competing clause of the constitution, as that road does not compete. He then went on to show that though the Pennsylvania owned only three million of the six million, five hundred thousand dollars' worth of stock, of the Northern Central, yet it was the controlling power. Being same officers, they were the purchasers in fact of the road, and owned the branches that competed with the Beech Creek.

The deputy attorney general concluded his argument by taking up the sections of the constitution claimed to have been violated, and he held that the provisions were plain as to the consolidation of competing companies. He spoke for four hours.

Wayne MacVeagh opened for the defense and spoke for over two hours. At the conclusion of his argument the court adjourned until to-morrow. In the course of his argument Mr. MacVeagh read the charter of the Pennsylvania company, granted by the state in 1870, which gave to that company the right to purchase any other line of railroad. He contended that if such chartered rights were taken away the value of the company's franchise would be decreased to an injurious extent. Mr. MacVeagh differed with the deputy attorney general on the question of competition, and claimed that the South Pennsylvania was not a competing line.

A Conchman's Conquest.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Swan C. Franzene left Ardmore to-day for Minnesota, where Mr. Franzene will labor as a missionary among the Swedish settlers. Their recent wedding has made public the history of a romantic courtship. The bride is a daughter of the late Charles Kugler of Ardmore, for many years State Senator from Montgomery county and long identified with the Lutheran Church and Publication Society. Her sister is Dr. Annie Kugler, now a missionary in India and recently assistant resident physician in the female department of the Norristown Insane Asylum. While Miss Florence was still a pupil of the Friends' school at Fifteenth and Race streets, she formed the acquaintance of the coachman of Dr. D. Hayes Agnew, who spends his summers at his country place near Ardmore. This coachman was a Swede of ordinary education, not at all, in the eyes of the world, the proper mate for a young lady of Miss Kugler's position, education, and prospective fortune.

Nevertheless, she declared her determination either to marry the coachman or go with her sister as a missionary to India. The young lady's relatives and friends opposed the match. The coachman resolved that he would fit himself to be the young lady's husband. Accordingly, he left Dr. Agnew's employ, and entered upon the studies required for the Lutheran ministry. During his school and theological course Miss Florence patiently waited. At last the young Swede's efforts were crowned with success. He was ordained, all opposition gave way, and last week Ardmore was entertained with a pretty wedding in the Lutheran church.

Explosion of Gas.

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—A. M. Cummings and J. E. Walker, who occupy rooms in College House, a dormitory of Harvard College, noticed a strong smell of gas at about 7½ this morning. Tracing it to the third story, they entered the room occupied by J. J. Cotter, where they traced the leakage to the pipe in the ceiling from which a chandelier had hung, but which was now stopped by a plug. Walker struck a match to see if the gas was still escaping. A violent explosion followed, and Walker, Cummings, and Cotter were thrown to the floor. All three were severly burned. Cotter's injuries are the most serious. The window sashes and half the furniture in the room were blown into the street. A brick wall on the street side was forced out an inch and the plastering of the entry wall was blown completely off The superintendent of the college buildings says the damage is considerable, and that the dormitory in its present condition is unsafe.

Fearful Mine Explosion.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 21.—A terrific explosion of gas took place in the No. 2 slope of the Delaware and Hudson coal company, at Plymouth, this morning. The greatest excitement prevails there, as the slope is full of men and boys.

LATER.—The miner who went into the abandoned opening and fired the gas that caused the explosion with fatal results at No. 2 shaft was Peter Zolinetzkey. There were two explosions. The first was soon followed by another, sweeping everything before it, sending a flame of fire up the slope and above the fan house, and knocking the shingles and timbers from the breaker 400 feet above the solid earth. Zolinetzkey was not killed, but was removed from the slope with only his boots on and no hair on his head, but he was otherwise uninjured. The scene that ensued was terrible. The victims of the disaster lay in every direction. Dennis Titus was instantly killed, and when found lay 200 feet from where he stood at the time of the explosion.

When the gas was ignited all the men in the slope were violently thrown to ground or against the cars or ribs of the gangways. The lights on their heads were extinguished by the shock of the second explosion, and all were in confusion making their way through the flames and managing with great difficulty to reach a place of safety. Following is a list of the dead thus far and also of the injured.

Dead—Dennis Titus.

Wounded—Anthony Spinnetts, Frank Spinnetts, John Levetzky, Thomas McDermott, Alex Love, John Calby, John Kirst David Grimes, John Woods, James Thomas, David Bryans, Frank Lamareaux, Thomas Howard, Thomas Collins and Edward Jones.

The four last named are in a terribly bad condition and cannot survive. The others are horribly burned and breathed flames to such an extent that their injuries are also considered fatal. The shaft at which the explosion took place is one of the largest operated by the Delaware and Hudson company, the average daily hoist of coal being from 350 to 400 car loads.

The worse anticipations of the physicians attending the wounded in the mine explosion to-day are being realized. Thomas Collins, miner, and Anthony Spinnetts and Levetzky, Polish laborers, have died, making four deaths thus far. Nearly all the others of the injured will doubtless die.

The Episcopal Congress.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 21.—At the Episcopal church congress last evening Canon Farrar spoke clearly and forcibly. "The doctrine of the atonement," he said, "is the key to Christian faith. Its truths declared the reconciliation of man to God. Errors have arisen from theological subtleties, and sometimes the name has been given to some systematic theory of an atonement, but the relief set forth in the Scriptures is the real doctrine of the atonement. I say at once, and without fear of contradiction, that no theory of the atonement, no scholastic explanation of the atonement, has ever been accepted by all creeds, or can put forth any claims to Catholicity."

Canon Farrar closed by saying that "nothing but failure has ever or can ever come of the effort to fathom God's nature by man's measure; but the infinitely blessed results of the atonement we know. They are the joy of our thanksgiving and of our life."

Latest Returns of the Official Count.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 21.—The total vote in the first twenty wards of Cincinnati, omitting the two precincts whose returns are irregular, and which are both Democratic, gives Hoadly 22,556; Foraker, 21,858; Leonard, 715. The vote on senators—Democratic ranges from 22,138 to 22,701; Republican from 21,421 to 21,540.

LATEST.—The official count of Hamilton county was closely watched all day by both parties. An application was made late this afternoon before Judge Buchwalter by an attorney for the Republicans for a restraining order forbidding the counting of two precincts in the Nineteeth ward and one in the Ninth ward in consequence of alleged irregularities. A temporary injunction was granted and a motion to make it permanent will be argued to-morrow. This, of course, will prevent any official announcement of the vote to-night.

Rent by an Earthquake.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., Oct. 20.—Excitement in Beaufort county over the earthquake that has rent a chasm of unknown depth in Longaire township continues unabated. It is near the Shiloh church. A reliable colored man who lives near by and had occasion to be up on the night of the earthquake says that he felt the trembling of the earth perceptibly. The fissure extends directly across the public road near the church. It is two inches in width and about one hundred yards in length, and appears to be steadily widening at the rate of about a quarter of an inch a day. Some of the people have become frightened and are moving away from the place.

Blowing Up a Dog.

WABASH, Ind., Oct. 22.—William Russell, a farmer, of Liberty township, this county, conceived the idea of killing a dog with dynamite. Russell procured a half-pound stick of the explosive, lured the dog into a field, and, attaching a fuse to the dynamite, tied it beneath the neck of the animal, and ran toward the fence. To his dismay the dog, frightened by the hissing of the fuse, followed him, and Russell barely reached the top rail, with the dog only a few feet in his rear, when the explosion occurred. Russell was somewhat injured by the concussion, and was completely covered with the remains of the deceased cur.

Forepaugh's Circus Wrecked.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—The first section of the circus train of Adam Forepaugh was badly wrecked shortly before midnight last night, by the breaking of an axle about a mile and a half east of Downingtown. Five cars were thrown in a heap, and travel was interrupted for several hours. There were a number of circus hands on the train, but none were injured. Several horses were hurt.

Death of Malcolm Hay.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 20.—Ex-First Assistant Postmaster General Hay died at 9:30 o'clock this morning of consumption.

Many Subjects Discussed.

NEW HAVEN, Oct 22.—The Episcopal congress continued its sessions yesterday. The first topic discussed was, "Grounds for Church Unity." The discussion was led by Bishop A. Cleveland Coxe, of New York. Canon Farrar was next introduced. The principal grounds for unity, the speaker argued, were, first, the unity of heart and soul amid divergencies of opinion and variation of practice; second, Christ's new commandment, the commandment so often repeated on the lips of Christians and so often belied in their actions—"Love one another;" third, that faith which in its highest sense to St. Paul had no other meaning than oneness with Christ.

"The last ground," said he, "on which I will touch, is that it is essential to the prosperity of the church that while we are disputing and wrangling often about the uncertain, often the infinite, the enemy is at our gates. What injures the cause of Christ is not in the least the evidence of indifference but the mismanagement of those indifferences."

Other speakers were Revs. Thomas Richey, of New York, David Sessions, of Memphis, Tenn.; Julius H. Ward, of Boston, and J. H. Hopkins, of Williamsport.

At the evening session the ethics of the tariff question were discussed. General H. Tremaine, of New York, made a protective address and said that while protection is distinctively a tenet of the republican party it should be adopted by the democratic party and made non-partisan.

A Notable Wedding in France.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—The civil marriage of the Princess Marie Francoise Helene d'Orleans, daughter of the Duke de Chartres and niece of the Comte d' Paris head of the royal house of France, to His Royal Highness Prince Waldemar, sixth child of Christian IX, King of Denmark, was solemnized to day at the Mairie of the Eighth Arrondissement, in the presence of a large and brilliant assemblage In consequence of the political situation, however, the King of the Belgians and the Czarina failed to attend, and the Compte de Paris was also conspicuous by his absence, it being feared that his political foes would sieze the opportunity and expel him from French soil. Upon the completion of the ceremony Mayor Koechlin made an address so full of admiring sentiments for the Prince as to cause offense to many Republicans. The religious marriage takes place to-morrow.

In Tremont Temple.

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—The city of Boston paid its formal official tribute to the memory of U. S. Grant this afternoon in a manner befitting the occasion. The exercises were held in Tremont temple in the presence of an audience which filled every part of the great auditorium. Mayor O'Brien presided. Howard M. Dow played appropriate musi upon the organ while the audience was being seated, and then, in conjunction with the large orchestra performed "Chopin's Funeral march." After prayer by Rev. R. F. Hamilton, of the Eliot church, and singing by the choir of fifty nine voices, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher was introduced by Mayor O'Brien and delivered the eulogy. After the eulogy the American song written by Rev. M. J. Savage, and set to music by Signor Vincent Cziollo, was the final number on the programme. The benediction concluded the exercises.

John Roach Visits Chester.

CHESTER, Pa., Oct. 23.—John Roach visited Chester to-day for the first time in five months. He was cordially greeted by everybody, both on the streets and at his office, where a number of his old employes called to pay their respects. Mr. Roach regreted exceedingly to see so many of his best mechanics still idle and he said he thought that all would get something to do before winter. It was proposed to give him an informal reception at the residence of his son this evening and this intention was communicated to him by Hon. W. M. Ward. He declined, however, at this time, promising to return to Chester soon and reciprocate the sentiments of the community in which he is so interested. He will return to New York to-morrow.

An Engineer Dies from His Injuries.

WILLIAMSPORT, Oct. 22.—Dave Roat, engineer of the west bound train which collided with an east-bound train near here on Tuesday night, died this evening, making the third victim of that accident. Roat's home was in Renovo. The evidence thus far shows that the men on the east-bound train failed to regard the signal displayed at Allen's Station, where they should have stopped for orders. The other persons injured in the collision are all doing well.

The White Man must Go.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—Sixty Chinese cigar makers in the factory of Koenigberger, Falk & Meyer struck work to-day because the men refused to discharge their white workmen. It is learned that the Chinese union of this city ordered the strike. This dictation by Chinese "that white men must go" has created some sensation.

A Centenarian Dying.

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Bridget Farley of West Stratford, aged 104 years, lies at the point of death, and her physician says she cannot possibly live till morning. Mrs. Farley was born in Ireland, Aug. 29, 1781, and came to this country in 1820, taking up her residence in New York city. Of her nineteen children, only two are now living. She retained all her faculties until yesterday.

Will Shut Down.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 21.—The Millers' Association has voted to shut down on Nov. 1. The reason given is that they cannot pay present prices for wheat and sell their flour in the East, on the basis of the advanced freight rate. They must either get cheaper freight rates or buy cheaper wheat. The millers assert that they are running at a loss.

Malcolm Hay.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 21.—At a largely attended meeting of the Allegheny county bar association this afternoon to take action on the death of Hon. Malcolm Hay, a number of eulogistic addresses were made and suitable minutes adopted. The funeral will take place to-morrow; interment to be private.

Crops in Central Illinois.

TOLONO, Ill., Oct. 22.—The present season is one of remarkable bounty in central Illinois. The corn crop, which is the great staple, has never had an equal. It is nothing uncommon for corn to make 80, 90, and even 100 bushels per acre. Forty five ears in some cases make a bushel of seventy-five pounds, which is the weight required when the crop first begins to move. Corn stalks in some fields have reached the almost incredible height of twenty feet. Pumpkins are not a staple crop but almost every farmer plants a few in his corn fields. This year they have grown beyond any precedent, and the crop, is astonishingly large. There is no market for them except for home consumption, when they bring the producer only 10 to 15 cents each for specimens weigbing from 40 to 75 pounds Many of them will rot in the fields. Potatoes are plenty, and there is no market for them even at 20 and 25 cents a bushel. Every species of nut-bearing tree is weighed down with a load of mast. The nuts are being gathered and shipped by the car load. Wheat and fruits are the only products of the country which are scarce.

A Bedford County Boy's Fate.

BEDFORD, Pa., Oct. 23.—James Smith, aged 13 years, living among the mountains in the southern end of this county, was killed by a panther last evening. His body was almost devoured by the beast.

The Eleventh Found.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The eleventh juror was obtained at 5 o'clock to-day for the trial of Ward. The panel being then exhausted, an adjournment was taken till to-morrow.

Blamed on Jealousy.

MORAVIA, N. Y., Oct. 23.—This afternoon Henry Deckerson killed his wife and then fatally shot himself. Jealousy was the cause of the tragedy.

Decreasing the Bovines.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Sixty-five cows on a dairy farm in West Chester county have been ordered killed, having pleuro-pneumonia.

Here is something for the ladies: Flirtations in sealing wax are the latest racket. Red is for business only; black wax is for mourning and condolence; pink for congratulations, and white for wedding invitations. Blue means love, and the color is used in various tints, to mark the different stages of affection. Variegated colors are said to indicate conflicting emotions. Two other things are being tried by the stationers to make wax works expensive and fashionable. They are beginning to use thimbles to bear seals, and hope to make some designs a popular craze. Then scented waxes are being imported from Paris, with a variety of colors, more or less desirable and costly. It is said one French firm makes wax, the perfume of which when burning will fill a room, and last for hours about the envelope.

Queer reading would be the history of names. We cannot, however, go into the subject now, except so far as to say that Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" was called by that name, in an informal fashion long before the Doctor dreamed of advertising it for public use. Speaking of it he would say to his patients "This is my favorite remedy for all troubles of the blood," &c., and its success was so great that he finally spelled the name with capital letters.

Once there was a hired man who was constantly astonishing his employer, a farmer, by doing strange and unexpected things. One day the farmer went into the barn and found that his man had hanged himself. Looking at the dangling body a few minutes, he exclaimed: "What on earth will that fellow do next?"

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS.

—Pumpkins, pumpkins, pumpkins everywhere.

—A few sealskin caps are appearing to drive in the straw hats.

—Joseph Mack, of Ebensburg, is the owner of a piano which is considerably over 100 years old.

—The familiar figure of Prof. John Hamilton, of State College, is seen in town often of late.

—Jennie, the third daughter of Mr. Jerry Fasic, died on Thursday of dropsy. She was about 14 years of age.

—The attendance at market continues good, despite the chilly atmosphere which prevails in the morning.

—What a glittering palace—what a Wanamaker's bazar on a small scale, is Wilkinson's when illuminated at night!

—S. & A. Loeb who are, we believe, the oldest general merchants in Bellefonte, have a finer store than ever before.

—Col. Daniel G. Bush is making a sensible, substantial stone gutter the entire distance in front of his hotel on High street.

—Several large and very heavy glass fronts for Thomas Reynolds' new building on Allegheny street were received on Thursday.

—We regret to learn of the death of the youngest child of Mr. E. A. Long, of Howard. Funeral on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

—Mr. C. P. Hilder, the artistic painter, has recently been doing some neat lettering in front of McCalmont & Co's establishment.

—The frost Friday morning was about the most destructive of the season, making flowers and plants look as if they had been scorched.

—We learn of the death of Hon. Geo F. Miller, a prominent citizen of Lewisburg and a gentleman of State reputation. The funeral services occurred on Saturday.

—A handsome new car appeared on the railroad track last Thursday. It is painted a bright blue color and is lettered in black, "Gerberich, Hale & Co., Bellefonte, Pa."

—The remains of the late Mrs. Catharine McMurtrie, of Coleville, were taken to Huntingdon on the 9:32 train last Thursday for interment. She was about 74 years of age.

—There was a very large number of passengers on the noon train from this place to Montandon Friday. It seems to us that a line over which there is so much travel ought to pay well.

—Dwight L. Moody, the world's most successful evangelist, will give two days of his time next month to Bellefonte, coming here on the 18th of November and remaining over the 19th.

—It affords us pleasure to say that among the newspaper manufacturers of whom we have purchased paper, none have been more courteous or given us better goods than Thos. W. Price & Co., of 505 Minor St., Philadelphia. Such a firm deserves to succeed and merits the patronage of all publishers.

—While it is quite proper to punish unruly pupils, in school, teachers should be careful of the way and severity with which they administer such punishment Do not strike them on the head and choke them as we have recently heard was the method adopted in Newberry, Lycoming Co., resulting in the illness of the pupil.

—The season for killing porkers and making sausage is here, and a few fat hogs have already yielded up their lives. As we walk forth in the early morning it is not the carol of the birds that we hear, nor the hum of innumerable insects, but it is the plaintive squal of the pigs or the agonized groan of the hogs, as they are led forth from a comfortable pen to meet the gleaming butcher knife.

—Mr. C. R. Musser, of Fillmore, is the champion corn husker and cutter of this region. The other day he began work at the usual time in the morning and forged ahead at such a rapid rate as to discover when twilight arrived that he had husked 110 bushels of corn, cutting the corn himself and tying his own fodder. This is about the biggest corn husking day on record, and if any one can do better let him speak out.

—The Centre County Sunday School Association will hold its sixteenth annual convention in the M. E. church, at Philipsburg, on Wednesday, Nov. 11th, at 9:30 a. m. Each school is is invited to appoint two delegates with the superintendent. All preachers in the county are delegates ex officio. In order to secure homes beforehand, delegates who desire entertainment should forward their names, not later than November 6th, to Mr. George W. Ganoe, Philipsburg, Pa.

—At the recent session of the Minnesota conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, the presiding bishop announced the transfer of Rev. G. D. Penepacker, of the Central Pennsylvania conference, and appointed him to Duluth. Mr. Penepacker was formerly of this place, but is now stationed in Altoona. On Sabbath, Oct. 11, he notified his congregation of the action of the church authorities and announced his intention of leaving for his new field of labor on or about November 1. His many friends will be sorry to learn of his transfer.

Courtesy in the Cars.

Perhaps nowhere are the laws of politeness, not to say etiquette, violated so grossly as in the cars. People who are ordinarily polite, on entering a car become at once transformed into the coarsest savages. Among a large number of people selfishness of the most revolting character is practiced. While some are met who believe in carrying their good manners and courtesy with them everywhere, the majority of travelers believe that when traveling bad manners are desirable. We do not hesitate to assert that, admitting the Darwinian theory of man's descent from the monkey to be correct, it would not require more than a hundred years perpetual life in the cars to carry man back again to his original condition.

An instance of this occurred only a few days ago on the Bald Eagle Valley Railroad. A delicate and refined lady who is now visiting in Bellefonte entered the car at a station not far off and seeing a vacant seat, occupied it. It is true that the seat was occupied by various parcels and valises, but nobody being there she took it as the only place she could find. Very soon a majesterial looking man stalked toward the seat. He was a gentleman of education, a member of a profession which is holy in its calling, and should have been ordinarily polite.

"Madame," he exclaimed, did you not notice that that seat was occupied?"

The lady flushed at being thus addressed. We are not informed whether she said anything or not. But we are glad to hear that a prominent military man, who is a citizen of Bellefonte, and had witnessed the affair, leaped from his place and said with his most deferential bow:

"Madame, be so kind as to occupy my seat." Our gallant military friend then found a seat with a gentleman just behind the brusque and discourteous individual. When the military man, on reaching for a parcel in the rack overhead, allowed it to fall and hit the man in front of him on the head, everybody in the car smiled and thought it served him right. A savage scowl was the only reply which the fellow made.

We wish every one who acts in this manner could be thus sat down upon.

About Cows.

During last Spring much was said about the cows which are so numerous on every highway and by-way of this borough of much-vaunted beauties. Perhaps its attractions would not be so marked were this bovine not abroad. The cow is of all hues and variegated and adds new colors to the harmony of autumn leaf, cloud-flecked sky and bright hued house.

But the cow is also a destructive creature. We believe that many dollars' worth of growing young trees have been destroyed by her this season. It is true that young trees are enclosed in boxes which are supposed to be effectual in protecting them. But we have yet to see a box made strong enough to prevent this quadruped knocking it down, or reaching above the top of it. She knows that there is a tender sapling inside that box and she rubs against it till she knocks it down; or, failing in that, she puts the gambling giraffe to shame in the way she elevates her head and stretches out her long neck to reach the branching top above the box. Seldom failing in her efforts, she pulls off the branches and twigs and kills the not too rapid or sturdy growth of the tree.

These new thoughts on an old and hackneyed subject were prompted by a spectacle which on Thursday came before our vision. Mr. Chas. Brown keeps a green grocery in the McCafferty block, in front of which was the usual assortment of tender young vegetables and greens. But when our attention was called in that direction about 4:30 p. m. two cows were seen with tails toward the street and heads toward the place where had been the aforesaid vegetables. But, alas! the place was now minus an article of that description, while the cows, after obtaining a most refreshing and fashionable dinner, were turning lazily away with an air of absolute satisfaction.

Suspicious Characters Arrested.

On Wednesday, Oct. 21, three suspicious characters were arrested for bad conduct and are now in jail. They looked like tramps and are very profane in speech and rude in their behavior. What adds to the suspicion that they may be criminals is the fact that they all had considerable sums of money about them. We have a description of only one of them. He is a stoutly built man, with black mustache, a burn on his left arm, is about 5½ feet in height and between 25 and 30 years of age. All of them are bout the same height. They gave the names of Thomas Collins, Charles Bell William McCay. These rough customers all seem to be of Irish descent. One of them gave a boy a bag containing six very old battered coins, five of them apparently one-cent pieces and the other a half-cent token of the Upper Canada Provinces. Four of these pieces had holes in them, one in the centre and the other at one side. The date on only two of them are decipherable, viz., 1838 and 1857. These facts are given because of the suspicion which attached to them and with the object of aiding anyone who may be searching for the perpetrators of crime.

Temperance Topics.

From that valuable exchange, the Altoona Tribune, we obtain the following facts in regard to the Eleventh annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which assembled in Huntingdon at 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning, Oct. 21.

There are about 200 delegates in attendance. Mrs. E. M. Blanchard, of this place, has been appointed a member of the committee on resolutions and plan of work.

Mrs. H. S. Wharton, of Huntingdon, delivered an address of welcome, and Mrs. Margaret Whitechurch, of Bryn Mawr, responded.

Mrs. Francis L. Swift, the President, delivered the annual address. Among the distinguished ladies present is Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, of Clinton, of Iowa. She delivered an address in the evening.

Reports from sixty unions showed a membership of 1,898, and the amount of money raised for all purposes $3,217.33. 84,265 temperance pamphlets and much other similar literature were distributed. Twenty seven Bands of Hope and eleven temperance schools are reported in a flourishing condition. Outside of Philadelphia, in which 305 unions were organized, the banner county is Mercer, which organized nine unions during the year. Crawford county was specially mentioned for the greatest number of gentlemen enrolled, and Lancaster county for promptness. The Young Women's Christian Temperance union of Oil City retains her banner for the greatest amount of money raised, $446.11, being sixty-one cents ahead of Philadelphia.

Schroeder—Harbster.

The elegant and impressive wedding ceremony which united Mr. Charles E. Schroeder and Miss Ida C. Harbster, at Reading, on Wednesday, October 21, is sure to interest the numerous friends of the groom in Bellefonte. The ceremony was solemnized in the Trinity Lutheran church, where there was a large gathering of society people. The great organ pealed forth Mendelsshon's wedding march under the artistic touch of Prof. Berg, as the bridal party entered.

The bride, a lovely brunette, was doubly beautiful in white Ottoman silk, with brocaded front, and trimmed with seed pearls and point lace entraine, and wearing an elaborate veil. There were four bridesmaids, whose costumes were equally elegant and rich. Harry Keller, of this place, was prominent among the four ushers. Rev. Dr. Fry was the officiating clergyman. Major D. S. Keller and lady, of this place, were among the distinguished guests, the groom being a brother of Mrs. K. The happy couple are spending the first ten days of married life in a wedding tour.

—The ladies who represent the W. C. T. U. throughout the State held their second day's session in Huntingdon on Thursday. We do not notice, by the published proceedings, that any business of very great importance was transacted. Two efforts were made to alter the constitution, one in regard to the fee paid to the National union, making it ten cents instead of five cents; also that the yearly local membership fees be changed from 60 cents to 70 cents. The second proposed alteration was to amend article 7 so that where local unions cannot send delegates to the State union the county union shall have the privilege of sending two. Both motions were lost. A report showed that 102,581 signatures were sent to the legislature last winter urging the passage of the hygiene text book law, which was accomplished so successfully. Mrs. E. M. Blanchard, of this place, conducted the devotional exercises in the afternoon. The evening lecture was by that eloquent lady, Mrs. Mary Hunt, of Hyde Park, Mass.

—The name News, with or without a prefix, is the most common in the world for a newspaper. There are 550 papers which are thus named. The next name most generally used is the Times, of which there was 489. They then rank in the following order: 415 Journals, 406 Democrats, 297 Gazettes, 273 Republicans, 198 Enterprises, 180 Independents, 180 Tribunes, 179 Records, 177 Couriers, 173 Sentinels, 149 Presses, 137 Registers, 128 Chronicles, 126 Reporters, 119 Stars, 117 Reviews, 108 Suns, 107 Leaders, 99 Advertisers, 89 Argus, 90 Standards, 89 Free Presses, 83 Posts, 74 Bulletins, 72 Expresses, 71 Banners, 70 Observers, 63 Unions, 61 Citizens, 59 Messengers, 54 Eagles, 53 Dispatches, 49 Advances, 49 Indexes, 46 Transcripts, 44 Mirrors, 39 Pioneers, 37 Commercials, 37 Globes, 35 Echos, 27 Watchmen, 27 Mercurys, and 20 Vindicators.

—The North, Central and South American Exposition to begin in New Orleans on the 10th of November is designed to be a tribute of peace and goodwill between the various nations of the three Americas. As such we consider it a most excellent enterprise and bid it success. We do not understand why there should be anything else than peace and good will between these countries.

—They have some remarkable names over in Philipsburg. The Ledger says that early on Sunday morning a dwelling in South Philipsburg, owned by Walter Starbird and tenanted by Elijah Bluebaker's family, was burned to the ground. The tenants were absent at the time and most of their household goods were destroyed. The building was insured for $700.

—On Tuesday evening, Oct. 20, the Bellefonte School Board met to take action in reference to the election of another teacher for the colored school. Mr. Green (colored), it will be remembered, was elected to that position some time ago. He then held no certificate qualifying him to teach, and his election was based on the expectation that he would obtain one. The board is required, at the expiration of the first month, to testify that all the teachers are thus qualified, and as they were unable to do so in this instance it was necessary to elect a teacher holding a certificate. Mr. Milton Furey was mentioned for the position a month ago and he was elected on Tuesday evening to succeed Mr. Green. Mr. Furey will make a most excellent teacher, as he has an excellent education and has taught for several years past. The colored school should make rapid advancement with a gentleman of such superior abilities as teacher.

New Polling Places.

It is the custom throughout Pennsylvania, remarks an exchange, to make use of the school houses as polling places, thus requiring the particular buildings selected to be closed to the pupils several days in each year. Opposition to the use of school houses for this purpose has been growing, and now the board of control of Harrisburg has determined that after this year the use of the buildings for voting purposes shall be discontinued, and the county commissioners have been notified to find other places for holding elections. This is a wise determination. After every election the school houses are found in a dirty condition, and in many ways greatly damaged. Then, too, the teachers are not willing to make up the days thus lost, so that an additional expense is incurred for which nothing is received.

—It is reported that some of the people of Huntingdon are incensed at Judge Furst because of the light sentence he imposed on Jack Laport, the murderer. A telegram in the newspapers states this bit of information, but we may as well declare now and here that we do not credit one tithe of the assertions made in the telegrams from that place. There must be a half dozen or so cranky scribblers in that town who are demented on the subject of obtaining notoriety abroad for their town, and they accordingly magnify the most trifling circumstance into a veritable mountain of importance. The sooner Huntingdon gets rid of such off-scourings of journalism the better it will be for that burg, as they are bringing discredit on the town. Judge Furst's sentence was just and correct in every particular, and the sensible citizens of Huntingdon will agree with us in saying so.

—An unusually extensive and disastrous freight wreck occurred on the Bald Eagle Division, near Fowler Station, on Thursday night. Engine 78, drawing the local freight, run into a drove of cows at that point, derailing the engine and throwing it down the bank, and piling four cars on one another. The engineer and firemen jumped when they saw the danger and saved themseves from injury. Two of the cows that caused this accident "passed in their checks" and will never stop another train. It was late at night before the track was cleared and passengers on the mail west and the express east were transferred.

Susquehanna.

From the Franklin Repository.

Mr. J. S. Nixon, of this place, while in attendance at Presbytery, at Newport, last week, engaged in conversation with the young Indian whom the Presbytery took under its care. In speaking of Indian names this young man said: "Now, the river Susquehanna received its name in this way: An Indian standing on one side of the bank called across to the other, 'Susque,' which means, 'are you there?' His friend replied 'Hanna,' which interpreted means 'I am here.' A white man standing heard it and named the river accordingly."

—The man named John Francis, who recently left Philipsburg for Valparaiso with the alleged expectation of obtaining a fortune of $2,000,000, and for whom some sympathy was expressed because he was supposed to have been defrauded of money and left penniless in California, is now, in turn, suspected of being a first class fraud. It is believed that he borrowed money of parties in Philipsburg, Houtzdale, Osceola, Snow Shoe and this place, estimated at $50,000, and is now beyond the reach of pursuit, living on his ill-gotten gains.

—Chairman Hensel is sending pictures of Candidate Day to Democratic editors but they look only once at his homely countenance and then slide the picture in a corner with the face to the wall. As a handsome man he don't begin to equal our Quay.

—The Huntingdon court a week ago heard argument on the rule of James Chamberlain, proprietor of the Warriorsmark hotel, to show why his license should not be revoked, but postponed a decision until probably November 10.

—A look at Garman's store window Friday night was rewarded by a sight of a large, lovely doll richly arrayed in an elegant plush cloak trimmed with swan's-down. All the contents of the window are tastefully arranged.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

From Mr. Harry Olmstead, Proofreader of "The Times."

The following letter is encouraging and worthy careful perusal, coming, as it does, from so reliable a source, unsolicited. It contains facts of great value:

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 12, 1884.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR:—For ten years I have been a sufferer from disease of the kidneys, at times so much so as to make life a burden. During this time several of the best physicians in Indiana have treated me with little or no success, until I had almost despaired of relief. I then tried several advertised remedies, but nothing produced the desired result until a friend who had been relieved induced me to give DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY a trial. I did so. After taking one bottle I began to experience relief. I took another and was charmed with the result. In all, I have taken four bottles, and can truly say I feel like a new man. I am confident I am entirely cured, as it has been several months since I took the last medicine and there is no indication of a return of the disease. I have recommended your remedy to several suffering friends who have also been relieved. I write this to return my sincere thanks to you for the cure which has been effected in my case, and also desire to say that I think suffering humanity owes you a debt of gratitude for your wonderful scientific discovery. I shall do all that in me lies to let all suffers know where they may find relief and thereby in some measure remunerate you for the good you have done me.

Wishing you long life and prosperity, and thanking you for prolonging my life, I am

HARRY W. OLMSTEAD.

DR. KENNEDY, OF RONDOUT, N. Y., assures the public by a reputation which he cannot afford to imperil that the "Favorite Remedy" does invigorate the blood, cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder complaints, as well as those diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. Your druggist has it; if not, send One Dollar to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. 17 36 1y

Local Department.

—The persons who do not munch chestnuts at this season of the year are in the very small minority.

—Mrs. Ezra Krumbine, an esteemed resident of Centre Hall, died on Tuesday, the 20th, aged about 46 years.

—Celery is very abundant, although most of it would be better if kept longer in the ground, as it is not perfectly bleached.

—The Fountain sold,—not like hot cakes, because they don't sell fast at all—but like ice cream on a hot Fourth of July evening.

—We hear that Mr. Dunlop, a carpenter living on Logan street, this borough, has been appointed mail agent between Renovo and Harrisburg.

—Mr. Harvey Mattern, son of George Mattern, was severely injured by being cut in the cheek a few days ago, while working with a threshing machine.

—Marbles is the diversion of the small boy, which never wanes in its interest, and lawn tennis seems to have an equally tenacious hold on the boy of larger growth.

—The burgess of Curwensville gives public notice that profane swearers who indulge in that vile habit on the Sabbath day in the cemetery and his hearing will be arrested and punished.

—A large barn owned by Harry Gates, at Julian, this county, was destroyed by fire on Monday night about 8 o'clock. Among the contents also destroyed were two or three valuable farming implements. The property was insured.

—Hallie Gregg, a four year old child of William Gregg, living along the Lewistown Pike, near town, fell from a rocking chair a few days ago, breaking her collar bone. The little one suffered considerably, but is now doing well.

—We are informed that Mr. Henry Beck, ex-clerk for the county commissioners, has purchased the store at Madisonburg, formerly owned by the Bartges Bros., and expects to do a prosperous business among the people of that handsome village.

—The Lutheran congregation of this place are contemplating the erection of a new church building, and the indications are that, under the skillful administration of their present wise and energetic pastor, the proposed edifice will soon be forthcoming.

—As the loads of yellow corn on the ear are conveyed through town, the small boy remembers that All Hollow-E'en must be celebrated next Saturday night. With the quickness of thought he grabs an ear and is as happy as a big sunflower as he runs off with it.

—Irvin Speer lost his way at Lock Haven, on the way to Williamsport, Saturday night. He was told which direction to go to catch the Williamsport train, but as he seemed to be uncertain which was up and which was down. It was quite a miracle that he finally succeeded in getting on the right train.

—Mr. Alfred B. Haupt, who has been engaged in business in Philipsburg for about two years, severed his business engagements last Saturday and came to Bellefonte, to remain for awhile. We predict that it will not be long until he devotes his energies to some new enterprise.

—Two deaths have recently occurred at Milesburg. Mrs. Anna Hoffman was buried on Sunday. We have not learned the exact time of her death. Mrs. Adams, quite an aged resident of that borough, died last Friday and was buried on Tuesday at 2 o'clock p. m. These two deaths cause quite a gloom in the little town.

—Even the Philadelphia and New York papers do not display as much enterprise as the Daily News in giving the religious services that occur in the churches on Sunday. Those so-called newspapers in the city are slow things, anyway, and if some of them would move down here to Bellefonte we might give them a few profitable lessons.

—It is said that a rolling mill, to manufacture iron hoops by the use of the patented and improved machinery invented by Mr. Bernard Lauth, of Howard, is to be located at Milton. These patents are said to be very valuable. By the use of the machinery a block of pig iron goes into the rolls and comes out a bar or hoop of iron of any breadth or thickness from one-sixteenth of an inch upward.

—The entertainment given by the Ellis Family, on Saturday evening, was successful artistically and financially. Humes' beautiful little hall was filled by an appreciative and highly-entertained audience. Some of the performances by this gifted family are truly remarkable. We have space to mention only a few. The tuned sleigh bells were played perfectly by Misses Romie and Fanny, and Little Gracie's whistling was exceedingly sweet and captivating. The family excel in their specialties and should have crowded houses everywhere. Gregg Post cleared $25.05 by the entertainment.

Religious Services on Sunday.

We give such information as we have been able to glean regarding the services that took place on Sunday. The day was pleasant after the dense fog of the morning had cleared away, and the churches were well attended.

In the Protestant Episcopal church, in the morning, Rev. John R. R. Robinson preached from James 5th chap., first clause of 17th verse, "Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are." His discourse was replete with interesting observations concerning the life and character of Elijah, of whose name Elias is the Greek. Elijah's greatest period of dejection and despondency was just after his most active labors, caused by zeal beyond his physical endurance. Similar despondency may occur in the life of the most zealous child of God. It may often be traced to physical causes. The cure prescribed for Elijah was, "Arise and eat." Soon after he was sent to perform more of the duties of his office—"Anoint Hazeal to be king over Syria; and Jehu to be king over Israel." The cure for the despondent Christian is to first seek refreshment and then to devote himself to suitable work. Other causes for despondency were instanced and their proper remedies pointed out. In the evening he delivered a brief address on the subject of "Conscience."

Mr. F. P. Green conducted the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4 o'clock, there being about 25 young men present. The topic was "Honored of God," and the Scriptural references were from the life of Daniel and his friends and a text from 1st Samuel.

Our excellent friend, Rev. J. A. Woodcock, preached in Trinity M. E. church, Lock Haven, Sunday morning and evening. At least, he was announced to do so in the Daily Democrat of Saturday.

The Forty Hours Devotion began on Sunday in the Catholic church on Bishop street, and will continued until last Tuesday evening. Rev. Father McIlhenny, of Snow Shoe, officiated in the church Monday evening Rev. Father Powers, of Lock Haven, arrived on Monday morning to take part in the services and other priests were expected to be present before the time for these special services closes.

In the Reformed church the services, both morning and evening, were conducted in the usual impressive and interesting manner. The narrative concerning Joash, King of Judah, is contained in II Chronicles, 24th chap., and his morning sermon was on the life and actions of that monarch. In the evening his text was that familiar and always forcible one found in St. John 3:16—"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

The pulpit of the Methodist church was filled by Rev. Mr. Lambert, of the Pleasant Gap circuit. His morning discourse was based on Romans 1:15—"For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." His evening sermon was from II Timothy 4:7—"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." The gentleman is a rapid, eloquent, entertaining talker.

In the Lutheran church the morning and evening discources were on the same subject and were listened to by large congregations with earnest attention. Rev. Chas. Steck's text was St. James 1:27, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." His text, which breathes the true spirit of genuine Christianity, is one which it is very needful to preach on at the present age of the church, because it teaches the lesson which the church is slowest to learn. The faith which is shown in modest, active devoted work is the very essence of the kind of a life that will glorify the religion we profess. He was entertaining and instructive on both occasions and in the evening quite animated.

The Act is Compulsory.

One of the questions lately submitted to the department of education, at Harrisburg, was: "Can boards of directors legally authorize the teachers in their employ to excuse pupils in the public schools from receiving instruction in physiology and hygiene when so requested by the parents of the children?" To this question State Superintendent Higbee answers that "the act relating to the study of these branches is strictly a compulsory law. Its terms are specific and mandatory. The directors have no authority under the law governing their official action to excuse any pupil from receiving instruction in physiology and hygiene; but, on the contrary, they are required to have it taught to all the children in their schools, as the act expressly provides."

—James D. Wood, of Mapleton, employed at the sand works of Samuel Hatfield, on Tuesday, the 20th, was caught in the belting of the machinery, making a narrow escape from death. He escaped with a broken arm.

—Charley Pierce, law student in Judge Orvis' office, was so unfortunate as to be thrown from his bicycle the other day, dislocating the elbow of his right arm.

General Beaver in Philadelphia.

General James A. Beaver and wife are in Philadelphia, the guests of N. Young, 546 North Fourth street. The General made speeches in the Nineteenth and Twentieth wards on Saturday evening, and on Monday night he spoke at Lincoln Hall, Broad Street and Fairmount Avenue, and at Oxford Hall, Twentieth and Oxford streets. The Times said that on Tuesday evening he would be at Masonic Hall, Manayunk, and at Odd Fellows Hall, Falls of Schuylkill; on Wednesday night at Horticultural Hall; on Thursday night, at Odd Fellows Hall, Frankford; on Friday night at Commissioners' Hall, Thirty-seventh and Market streets, and Liberty Hall, Eighth and Lombard streets, and on Saturday night at Town Hall, Germantown.

In speaking of next Tuesday's election, the General remarked that in his opinion it will be simply a question of majority, gauged by the number of Republicans who come out. He believes it will be a big vote for an off year. He believes also that the Irish vote given to Blaine last year will be retained. Parnell, in Ireland, is really making a battle for the tariff and the deepest Irish thinkers are beginning to consider that their interests lie closer to Republican than to Democratic principles.

The General has made a study of Virginia politics, as he has relatives in that State. He says that the people of the North hardly understand Fitzhugh Lee's campaign, riding in his uncle's saddle and dressed in the grey. Lee has to revive the war memories to bring back the ex-Confederate soldiers who have followed Mahone. The feeling is growing rapidly with them that their interests are identical with those of Pennsylvania. Many are convinced that Virginia's future lies in the development of her great mineral belt and the growth of her manufacturing interests. They see our State prosperous and adding to its wealth and they are asking the reason why. Mahone, Cameron, Wise and other old soldiers understand it all and are endeavoring to teach that Republican principles, mainly the tariff, have made Pennsylvania what she is to-day.

"It must be an edifying and instructive spectacle," said the General, "to see Fitzhugh Lee alight from the saddle of Gen Robt. E. Lee, plant Pickett's flag, and, surrounded by the cavalry in grey, pick up the pieces of barbecued beef on a stick and wait on the colored multitude, whose suffrage he is seeking. I was told by a colored citizen that even chicken salad would not catch him for the Democratic party."

Of Our Welcome.

[Personal letters of acknowledgment are now being received by our citizens, from those who were delegates and visitors to the Synod of the Presbyterian church which met in our town last week. We are permitted to copy from one of them the following.]

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22, 1885.

"MY DEAR FRIEND: The visit of the Queen of Sheba to Solomon, in realizing more than her brightest anticipations, was more happy than that of some others, but I am glad to say that our retrospective view more than covers the picture of what had been our most brilliant prospects. The skies were never brighter, nor the scenery more varied nor more beautiful, than we found them in our journey to the mountains this autumn. All this had its charms, but not so great as our social and religious life in Bellefonte—your beautiful mountain home.

You remember that Homer in his Iliad and Virgil in the Æneid, thought it quite as necessary to weave into their poems the story of friendship as of love. How delightful is the meeting of old friends and the beginning of new friendships! Although wondrously true friendship is the growth of years we sometimes meet a man whom we can remember among our chosen ones on a shorter acquaintance. Such I think was Dr. E—. He is a true, loyal man, and we both concluded that our visit to your house was one of the pleasantest of our lives. But all who went and all who came bear like testimony of the delight, the charm, and the benefit of their visit to the good people of Bellefonte. Very dearly, yours, etc."

—On Monday morning we were shown the plans for a new school building to be erected on the Spring street side of the public school property, midway between Linn and Lamb streets. It is a very handsome structure with a cupola and observatory on top. It will contain eight rooms, from every one of which stairs lead to the outside, rendering egress perfect in the event of sudden panic. The school rooms will be long and not too wide, permitting the teacher to obtain a fuller view of the pupils than if the rooms were square. This also permits a flood of light to enter from either the east or west—not in the faces of the scholars, which would be injurious—but from the side. The cloak rooms are in the centre of the building, preventing access to them by any parties whose motive might be only to steal. Hot air ventilators will be placed in the centre of the structure which, in the calmest days, will produce a constant circulation of pure air. It will be a neat structure of brick, tastefully trimmed and ornamented on the outside. But the crowning feature of the building is a figure to be placed in a niche on the Spring street side. This statue, which is to be that of a Bellefonte gentleman, will be in the act of handing books to the pupils, or engaged in some other act suitable for a great public educator. Who is this person? you ask. Well, the gentleman whose statue will occupy this conspicuous and honorable position will be the one who will give $15,000 or $20,000 for the erection of the building, and will probably be one of the handsome, highly-educated bachelors on Linn St.

[Communicated.]

Influence.

The visible is everywhere surrounded by the invisible, the known by the unknown. Everything above, around, beneath is subject to influence. If we stand upon some rocky cliff, we will see the tide rise and fall at regular intervals; no hand is seen, no voice is heard, save the murmur of the wave. The sun and the pale-faced moon were the silent workers that disturbed the bosom of the great deep. Just as the magnet influences the needle, so does man influence his brother man; the minister, his congregation; the colonel, his regiment; the demagogue, his party. The drunkard and the gambler oft owe the beginning of their downward course to the immoral atmosphere to which they have been exposed.

Go where you may, to the regions of the frozen North, or the wilds of Africa, the waves of influence (all unseen as the passing breeze) hover around about us.

When we think of this, and of the deadly foes which lurk in every pathway all over our fair earth, need we wonder that so many homes are wrecked, so many fond hopes crushed, so many buds of promise blighted, ere they began to bloom? E. W. C.

—The Woman's Christian Temperance Convention at Huntingdon finally adjourned on Friday night. The constitution was amended during Friday's session so as to create a vice president, and Mrs. J. R. Jones, of Philadelphia, was elected to that position. Great confusion was caused when Mrs. Judge Williams, of Wellsboro, offered the following resolution: "Resolved, That while we are all loyal to the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in its regular plan of work, we do not endorse the resolution adopted at St. Louis last year, committing the State convention to the advocacy of a political prohibition party." The convention refused to agree on this resolution, and the following was substituted and adopted: "Resolved, That the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Pennsylvania desires to go on record as a unit for prohibition principles, differing only as to the surest, best and quickest way of securing it." Mrs. William Patton, of Philadelphia, was elected delegate at large, representing the Young Ladies Union of the State to the National convention. Mrs. J. P. Harris was elected a delegate to the National convention, to represent this county.

—The funeral of Daniel Roat, the engineer who died from injuries received in the late railroad accident near Williamsport, says the Daily Democrat, of Lock Haven, occurred on Saturday. Services were held at his late home in Renovo, after which the remains were placed aboard a special train and brought to Lock Haven. The train arrived at the Clinton avenue crossing at noon and was met by the Odd Fellows of that city. Under the directorship of Jerome Bricker the funeral procession, which was composed of about two hundred people from Renovo and a number from Lock Haven, in addition to the Odd Fellows, and a number of railroad officials from points below, proceeded to Highland cemetery, where, by the funeral exercises of the order, all that remained of the faithful engineer was laid to final rest. Mr. Roat was well known by many people in Bellefonte who will sorrow with other friends in his death under such sad circumstances.

—William F. Reber, of this place second lieutenant of company B, Fifth regiment, went to Altoona Tuesday. Lieutenant Reber will act as judge advocate of the board of court martial detailed to try the case of Henry Wise, of company D, Altoona, charged with disobedience of orders. The other members of the court are Major S. F. Statler, of Bedford; Capt. R. C. Elder, of company G, Lewistown; Captain E. T. Carswell, of company H, Johnstown; Capt. Amos. Mullen, of company B, Bellefonte, and Capt. P. J. Woleslagle, of Co. A, Curwensville. These officers met yesterday. The court assembled at the armory of Co. D at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and the deliberations were presided over by Major Statler as president. Captain Burchfield has detailed a corporal and two privates of company D for guard duty, and also one of the company as clerk.

—A great sensation was caused at 12:30 o'clock on Tuesday in the town of Patterson, near Mifflintown, by the alarming news that William Hartman, "an old and highly respected citizen of that place," had committed suicide by hanging himself in the hay mow of his stable, in the rear of his lot, on Market street. He was in his 72d year and was a very well to do citizen. Recently, a few circumstances had transpired to trouble his mind, although such troubles were more imaginary than real.

—Let's call this our Indian Summer.

Personal Pencilings.

Ex-Gov. Curtin is in Washington.

Mr. W. I. Fleming spent Sunday in Williamsport.

S. J. Shope of Milesburg, spent last week in Clearfield.

J. A. Finkbinder, the photographer, has returned from Williamsport.

Mr. Sol. Goldsmith is at home again and the Bee Hive is buzzing louder than ever.

Rev. W. Scott Wilson, of Altoona, is engaged on a new poem entitled "Arcadia."

Rev. Owen Hicks, of Howard, will lecture at Lamar on Saturday evening, Nov. 7.

Mr. Henry Miller, of Millheim, was attending Supreme Court, in Pittsburg last week.

Mrs. M. C. Miller and Miss Mary Devling, of this place, are visiting friends in Huntingdon.

Mine host, C. G. McMillen, of the Brockerhoff House, is spending a few days in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Lucy Moyer, of this place, is now visiting in Oswego, Kansas, expecting to be away several months.

Chaplain McCabe sung, talked and collected money in the Williamsport M. E. churches on Monday.

Chas. McCormick, Esq., a prominent citizen of Lock Haven, shook hands with Bellefonters on Thursday.

Mrs. John P. Harris and her daughter, Miss Emma, departed Wednesday for Philadelphia, to remain a few days.

Mrs. Shelden, a resident of the Quaker City and very popular in Bellefonte, is a guest at the home of T. R. Reynolds.

Mr. M. L. Miller, of Rock Springs, spent a few minutes of Wednesday, Oct. 21, in pleasant conversation in this office.

Prof. C. J. Bell, formerly of State College, is now a member of the Faculty of John Hopkins University, Baltimore Md.

Rev. T. Cameron, of the United Brethren church, who now lives at Julian, expects to move to Philipsburg in a few days.

Col. D. H. Hastings and ex-Judge Adam Hoy came home from Pittsburg on Thursday evening. They were attending to legal business in that city.

Rev. R. Crittenden was attending the 21st annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Sunday-school Association, in session at Sunbury last week.

Mr. F. X. Lehman, proprietor of the Walla Halla House, Williamsport, pleased his Bellefonte friends by appearing among them on Monday evening.

Mr. Hud Crissman, who, we believe, is engaged as book-keeper some place in the southern part of this state or in Maryland, was in Bellefonte Monday.

Mr. A. B. Miller, of Spiece, Miller & Co., Philadelphia, was seen walking across Diamond Square, Monday. He favors Bellefonte with his presence once in about six weeks.

We are much pleased to chronicle the return home of Judge Jno. Orvis. The pleasure we feel is increased by the fact that he has almost entirely recovered from his recent illness.

Mr. Perce Carskaddon, of Lock Haven, who is well known here, was a passenger on one of the trains wrecked near Williamsport, on Tuesday evening, the 20th. He escaped without injury.

Mrs. Simpson, daughter of Benner Waddle, of Buffalo Run, accompanied by Mrs. S's daughter, Mrs. Lily Pettit, both of Hicksville, Ohio, are at present visiting friends in this vicinity.

Mr. Augustus Smith, the veteran tinsmith, who formerly resided in this place and has recently been engaged at Bedford, Centre Hall, Milesburg and other places, is in Bellefonte Monday.

Mrs. R. M. Magee and children went on the 9:32 train, Friday morning, to Lewistown. They were accompanied by Mrs. Nolan, Mrs. M's mother, and will visit for a few days at her home in that place.

Mr. John Sourbeck, the green grocer, came home on Tuesday from a visit to his orange groves and coffee plantations in the South. He reports everything lovely for large shipments during the Winter.

Miss Constance Richard, the accomplished and attractive daughter of F. C. Richard, the jeweler, departed for Philadelphia last Thursday, to spend a few weeks among her numerous friends in that city.

Mr. P. Gray Meek went to Philadelphia on Monday evening. That other prominent Democrat, Mr. Andrew Brockerhoff, boarded the train with him at the same time, though we did not learn his destination.

Mr. W. A. Tobias, of Millheim, ex-Recorder of Centre county, was enjoying the sunshine in Bellefonte Monday. He don't often come to Bellefonte and when he does come remains only about two hours, but he is ever the same popular, genial "Toby."

Hon. Thos. Armstrong, of Pittsburg, one of the members of the Greenback-Labor-etc., party, came to town on Monday with one of the other members, Mr. T. P. Rynder, and together they greeted the citizens of Bellefonte in a very pleasant manner. We advise both of them to vote for Quay next Tuesday.

Stormstown Echoes.

STORMSTOWN, Oct. 24, 1885.

The Quarterly Meeting at Ross' church, on Sunday, was largely attended. Rev. Whitney was assisted by Rev. Pardoe, of Tyrone, the latter preaching three eloquent sermons.

Literary societies are in operation at Maringo and Centennial school, and are of an interesting character.

Henry Brindle, of the mines, is in a very critical condition, physically, as he is suffering from a stroke of paralysis, being unable to speak so as to be understood.

Harvey Mattern, son of George Mattern, near Scotia, was the victim of an accident the other day which might have caused his death. He was threshing at his father's barn with an 8-horse power machine, and getting too close to the tumbling rod, was caught in it. He saw that he was being drawn to a horrible death and realized his peril. Being a stout young man, he threw up his hands and propped himself for all there was in it. His blouse and shirt were torn off of his body, he was badly cut about the face and head and had some teeth knocked out. Dr. Tobin dressed his wounds, and he is doing as well as can be expected.

Rev. Whitney preached an interesting sermon at the mines last week, occasionally poking the whiskey drinker under the ribs. He is an earnest temperance worker and added seven new members to the rolls at the mines.

Charley Roop, of Loveville, began to teach school at the mines to-day. He is quite young and this is his first attempt. I hope he may have the success he deserves. COB.

A BASE FORGERY.

The Attempt to Mix the G. A. R. in Politics Proved to be a Democratic Trick.

Commander Austin Curtin, of the G. A. R., Wednesday received the following from New Castle, Pa.:

The Grand army badges attached to our appeal to Pennsylvania soldiers is a base forgery. It is a villainous attempt to ruin our old commander with the G. A. R. Having failed in breaking down his military character, they would now, by this diabolical act, make us to prostitute this grand organization of which most of us are members to help their nefarious work. Signed—

J. C. EUWER,
D. W. PEARSON,
JACOB SHAFFER,
J. O. MCKEE,
Committee of the 134th Reg't., P. V.

—Mr. Thomas A. Armstrong, of Pittsburg, has been over in Centre county making Greenback speches. He says he attended the Methodist church in Milesburg on Sunday. The usual collection was taken up, and when the basket reached Mr. Armstrong, having already passed two-thirds of the congregation, it contained one solitary cent. This the Greenback leader adduces as an illustration of the poverty of the people over there.—Altoona Tribune.

The above, we are informed, is correct, with the exception that the basket had passed only two-thirds of the people on one side of the church. Two-thirds of one-half is exactly one-third of the whole. But we don't see why the Altoona Tribune exposes our poverty. Church collections are not a fair criterion.

—The Lock Haven Daily Democrat said on Tuesday: "While in Washington city lately ex-Superintendent T. N. Magee passed an extraordinarily good examination before the civil service commission and had no difficulty in doing so either. Mr. Magee is now a resident of Centre county, but that does not take him any further away from our friendship and regard for him as a gentleman of intelligence, honesty—in fact, all the points that go to make a man. Our friend has not yet received his appointment, but will in all probability, receive it soon. The administration of the governments affairs cannot go amiss if all offices will be filled by men of Mr. Magee's calibre and character."

—Edward Everett, a hostler in Newberry, Lycoming County, is a nephew of Edward Everett, the famous author. He was so talented that when a youth of only 18 years he graduated from Yale College, the rules of the institution being suspended in his favor. When with his uncle, who was then the Consul in London, he was present at the marriage of Queen Victoria. Afterwards he traveled in Egypt and the Holy Land. He became unfortunate and is now a hostler. At least, that is the tale the man tells, and to prove the truth of it, shows some aged manuscript letters written to him by his uncle.

—Mr. R. A. Beck's clarionet, the notes of which swell out upon the air these autumn days, charm even the dumb brutes and make them eager to add to the harmony. Monday and Tuesday a music-loving hound has been attracted to the pavement outside the barber shop, and with all the musical powers with which he was possessed joined in the air which was being rendered. We can not say that these first efforts of the hound were artistically successful, but they give much hope for future improvement.

DIED.

HITE.—On October 22, at Houserville, William Harvey, son of John F. and Phoebe A. Hite, aged 20 years, 8 months and 10 days. Death caused by typhoid fever. Funeral services conducted by J. H. Welch.
